Congress on Spot In Dad-Draft Order

GIVEN ONLY 16 DAYS TO BLOCK MOVE

Two Bills Now on Agenda Are Ignored as McNutt Orders 3-A Reclassifications.

ACTION SURPRISING

Estimate 300,000 Will Be Called Clashes With WMC Statements.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Congress will have only 16 days after its recess ends to decide whether to block the drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, now scheduled to begin Oct. 1.

War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt authorized local draft boards to begin reclassifying the 6,559,000 Class III-A registrants—mostly fathers of children born before Sept. 15, 1942—to make them available by order number for induction during the last three months of 1943

Congress which has been cool to the drafting of fathers, returns from its recess September 14. Two bills dealing with the drafting of fathers is on the agenda, but their sponsors—Rep. Paul J. Kilday, D., Tex., and Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont.—were not in the capital for comment after McNutt's announcement.

Kilday would place fathers at the bottom of state draft pools, prohibiting the drafting of any father in any state until all of the state's local boards have exhausted their supply of other men. Wheeler would defer the drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers until Jan. 1, 1944.

Kilday's bill has passed the house and is pending in the senate military affairs committee Wheeler's was approved by the senate military affairs committee about a week before the recess started. He did not press for final action because he felt confident then that fathers would not be called before the end of the year.

McNutt's action was somewhat a surprise. Recent WMC and selective service statements have hinted that the drafting of fathers

Council To Set Up Funds For Survey of 1,000-Acre Tract During Session.

PLAN NEGOTIATIONS

City's Next Move To Be Talks With Farm Owners on Price For Land Purchase.

City council tonight will take the first step toward the purchase of 1,000 acres of land necessary for the airport expansion project by setting up funds for an appraisal of the land and to enable the city to start negotiations with the property owners, Russell Porch, chairman of the council finance committee, said today.

Legislation to get the project under way was mapped last night by the finance committee in a caucus with city officials Council will be asked at its monthly meeting tonight to set up the expense funds and authorize the mayor or service-safety director to provide for inspection and appraisal of the land.

The next move will be to take options on the land the city will need and begin negotiations with the farm owners in the area which will be included in the airport, Porch said.

Meeting last night with the council finance committee were Mayor W. J. Locke, Service Safety Director Fred B Wolff, city Engineer W C. Statler, Capt. J. R Harrington, airport manager, and City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner. Also attending the caucus were two other councilmen, Clifford G. Knarr and George C. Kyle.

Mayor Locke said he spent most of yesterday at the airport, going over the land area which the Civil Acronautics authority engineers have said will be needed and obtaining details on the proposed project for council.

While the airport job will be the major piece of legislation before council tonight, a number of other

Axis Defenses Crumbling as Army Advances

Five Sicilian Towns Taken As Allied Forces Wipe Out 70 Mile Bulge; Prisoner Toll 90,000; Berlin Says FDR Offers New Terms.

(By Associated Press)

Allied troops racing to deliver the knockout blow in the battle of Sicily were officially credited today with smashing through the center of the enemy's 55-mile Mt. Etna defense line, capturing at least five more strategic towns and wiping out a bulge of 70 square miles.

Axis defenses appeared to be crumbling rapidly.

"Our troops, fighting hard, are forcing their way through rugged and roadless country," the Allied command announced.

Italian headquarters acknowledged that the Allies had launched a powerful assault on the German-defended southern flank where Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth army has been hammering for weeks to break into Catania

"The enemy has extended his attacks on the southern sector of the front, where bitter fighting is going on," the Italian war bulletin said.

Axis prisoners passed the 90,000 mark.

As the battle raged into its climactic phases the German news agency DNB broadcast a Geneva dispatch to the Italian newspaper Il Popolo Di Roma declaring President Roosevelt had made a seven-point armistice proposal to Italy.

By Axis account, Mr Roosevelt laid down the following terms:

1 The Italian army and navy are to cease all resistance.

2 Collaboration with Germany must cease at once.

3. Italian troops in Greece, Albania, France and former Yugoslavia are to be withdrawn at once.

4. War materials must be handed over to the Allies undamaged.

5. A British - American - Soviet military government will be established in Italy until the end of operations.

6. The arrest of all war criminals.

7. Release of all Allied prisoners of war on Italian soil.

The terms, noticeably stiffer than those offered last week by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and received with silence by Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio's new regime, apparently were calculated to put an end to Italian hopes for a bargain-counter peace.

On all world fronts, the Allies were in the ascendancy.

Events at-a-glance:

RUSSIA—Berlin radio admits Red armies have entered German keystone base at Orel, says Russians are "attacking with great violence, especially in southern part of the town"; Moscow reports Soviet troops kill 2,500 Nazis, capture 70 more villages.

AIR WAR—Huge RAF armada blasts Hamburg for eighth time in 10 days, breaking all records for sustained attack on single target; Stockholm dispatches describe Germany's second biggest city as "a heap of rubble"; 30 RAF bombers lost; other Allied planes attack Ruhr valley, Holland and northwest Germany.

On the Sicilian front, General Eisenhower's command announced Allied armies were sweeping into the western end of the Catania plain, while Allied warships were reported shelling German and Italian troops retreating eastward

Disorderly House Operator Gets Year In Marysville, Occupant 6 Months.

The operator and one resident of a disorderly house raided at 110 West Fourth street early Sunday morning by Mansfield police today had been given additional sentences in juvenile court.

Blanche Williams, 50, charged with contributing to the delinquency of a 17-year-old Fremont youth arrested during the raid, was sentenced to a year in the Marysville reformatory by Juvenile Judge Stuart H. Cramer. She received a 90-day jail sentence and $100 fine from Municipal Judge H. H. Schettler yesterday morning on the charge of being the operator of a disorderly house.

Also cited into court on the juvenile delinquency charge, Virginia Harmon, 24, was sentenced to the Toledo workhouse for six months. Earlier yesterday in municipal court she was fined $50 on the charge of being an occupant of a disorderly house.

The youth, who works in Willard, was put on a two-year probation in care of the Willard chief of police by Judge Cramer The

Murder Victim Once Arrested Here After Wild Auto Chase

The body of a 21-year-old Cleveland youth, found Friday at the side of a road near Akron, was identified by fingerprints today as that of David M. Hunter, jr., arrested June 23 in Mansfield on a charge of driving a stolen automobile 90-miles-per-hour through the business district.

The slain man was shot twice in the head and once in the body and apparently was thrown from an automobile.

Cleveland police said today that Hunter was killed by his cohorts in crime because he was ready to surrender and to implicate others in a series of holdups.

The Cleveland youth had been hunted since July 16 in connection with the holdup of a Cleveland tavern in which the loot totaled approximately $2,000

Hunter was arrested in Mansfield after he was spotted by State Patrolmen Melvin G Basilius, of the Mansfield sub-station, driving at a high rate of speed on U. S. Route 42, about five miles from the city.

After Hunter failed to heed Basilius' order to stop, a 90-mile-an-hour race led into the city Hunter was arrested only after Basilius pulled along side him with his gun drawn and aimed at the driver's head. The patrolman was traveling alone

Hunter was taken to Richland county jail where it was learned that he was wanted by Cuyahoga county authorities.

He was released on $5,000 bond recently after being indicted for operating an automobile without the owner's consent. Basilius testified at this hearing. Hunter served 15 months in Ohio State Reformatory on another car theft three years ago. He is the son of a Cleveland real estate dealer.

APPEALS SUIT

Seeks Supreme Court Ruling on Kroger, A&P Tax Case.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— The attorney general's office prepared today to appeal to the state supreme court a district appellate court order for Tax Commissioner William S. Evatt to collect alleged deficiency sales tax assessments approximating $434,000 from Kroger Grocery and Baking company and the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company.

The lower court decision in most respects affirmed a report last December by Special Master Commissioner Carrington T. Marshall that Kroger should have collected $143,000 more in sales taxes and A. and P. $285,000 for the greater part of 1935. Fifteen per cent penalties boosted the aggregate to $434,000.

Evatt said that while he was anxious to collect all taxes due the state, he felt that since the state supreme court once held there was no evidence to show the two firms owed the tax money, the appellate court's action should be carried to the high court to clarify the matter.

LOSES RATION

Columbus Man Admits He Drove To Toledo Race Track.

COLUMBUS —(UP)— A local ration board today revoked the "B" gasoline ration book of Raymond Koos, an employe in the city treasurer's office and suspended his "A" book for 30 days.

The action was taken after Koos admitted he and Martin Kohl, superintendent of the city's garbage disposal plant, drove to Toledo recently in Koos' automobile to work at a race track.

Herbert Says, "Get Shackles Off Industry."

MARION — (AP) — President Roosevelt's program for post war aid to returning soldiers was criticized by Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Herbert here last night before the Marion County Young Republican club.

The first thing in post war planning by the American people, Herbert said, should be to "strike needless bureaucratic shackles from industry so that business may expand and furnish jobs for the returning soldiers."

GIVES 'EM AWAY

FDR Promises British 200 U. S. Ships, Churchill Reveals.

LONDON —(AP)— Prime Minister Churchill told the house of commons today President Roosevelt had promised to turn over to Great Britain between 150 and 200 American-constructed ships on which work already has started.

A letter which the prime minister read in the house explained the process of handing over the ships would be spread over a 10-month period.

He told commons this would absorb the reserves of trained seafaring population and the resources of both the United States and Britain would be "economically and providentially applied to the main purpose of the war."

Churchill said there was no financial arrangement.

Have Too Much Produce? Contact Garden Exchange

Prompted by the problems of victory gardeners who have too much produce for their own use and those who have less than they need, the Richland county food preservation committee today announced plans for a garden produce exchange.

The exchange, patterned after the successful victory garden plot exchange which brought together those with available land and those without, will act as a clearing house for the "too much and too little" problems of produce.

Persons with fruits and vegetables to sell and those who are in need of these are requested by the committee to telephone 1394-6, the garden center at the Mansfield

Spends 15 Days Behind Enemy Lines, Befriended By Sicilians

By C. R. CUNNINGHAM
(UP Staff Correspondent)

MISTRETTA, Sicily, July 31.—(Delayed) — The slender fellow was a blond, wore G-I shoes and dog tags but the rest of him looked native Sicilian, including the green-checked shirt.

"Honest, captain," he told Capt. Paul Gale as the officer came out of his headquarters here. "I'm an American. Here, see my dog tags. I'm in the air force."

Gale took the fellow to a casualty clearing station. He identified himself as Staff Sgt. Arthur P. Rohr, 21, of Lewisville, O., and downed five plates of sauerkraut, a whole chicken and a bottle of wine.

Then he said: "Boy, I was lonely. For 15 days I was lonely."

He had lived with Sicilians, slept on hillsides and moved through enemy lines for 15 days before he met the advancing Americans. He is the only survivor of a bomber lost near Mt. Etna, and he doesn't know how he managed to get out. The plane caught fire from an engine.

"I ran to escape through the trap and pulled the release but it wouldn't open," he said. "I jumped on the hatch, which you aren't supposed to do because if you go out that way you might get caught in the slipstream. I guess that's what happened to me."

He must have struck his head on

So successful was the defense that the great force of U-boats was unable to launch a single attack, the admiralty said. The convoy was eastbound.

The fight between the warships and planes on one side and the submarines lasted three days. The action occurred some weeks ago.

RACING: Huge Fires Continue To Roar In Ploesti Oil Area

(By Associated Press)

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Aug. 2.—(Delayed)—Rumanian and German fire fighting services are battling a great fire which has been raging in the entire petroleum area near Ploesti hit Sunday by American Liberator bombers, according to the first eyewitness account reaching neutral Turkey today.

The latest information was that seven United States Liberators participating in the raid were forced down in Turkey, while an eighth was reported to have crashed in the sea near enough to the Turkish shore for the crew to make its way to land in rubber boats. All the crews were interned.

Three of the bombers came down in the Izmer district of the west Turkish coast. There were no details concerning the others.

The first report of the Ploesti fire came in a telephone conversation with an eyewitness who was near hysteria and obviously awed by the terrific destruction the raid had inflicted.

He said the fires were the biggest he had ever seen anywhere.

He said the bombers hit just about everything worth hitting in the entire mile-long oil pumping and refinery district in and around Ploesti.

A terrific air battle raged during the attack. Swarms of Rumanian and German fighters were waiting at high altitudes for the American bomber fleet and pounced as it neared the target.

The defenses had been on the alert approximately an hour, as the flight of the Americans had been charted while they were still crossing Bulgaria.

The eyewitness said he saw some big bombers crash but that many more of the attacking fighters came down.

The raiders headed straight for their individual targets, heedless of the fierce opposition, while the gunners poured steel into Focke-Wulf 190s flown by Germans and Messerschmitts piloted by Rumanians.

The low height at which the American airmen flew to the attack threw the ground gunners off their aim.

The eyewitness said it still was impossible to assess accurately the damage because of the widespread fires, but that probably the Ploesti region's efficiency as an oil

CRACKING: Munda Defenses Crumble Before U. S. Advance

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—The battle of Munda neared its climax today with United States forces breaking down final Japanese defensive positions after a general advance of 500 to 1,200 yards carried them almost to the edge of the strategic New Georgia airfield.

Supplementing Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Tuesday communique which announced the advance, a naval spokesman for Admiral William F. Halsey's command in the South Pacific said American troops reached a point "close to the eastern edge of the field."

A portion of Biblo hill, enemy stronghold defending the northeast approach to Munda, was captured in the American onrush, the spokesman said. He disclosed that tanks, flame throwers and artillery supported Marine and army units in their advance.

Many Japanese were killed in the attack. Although there was no indication of retreat, Japanese resistance was not as strong as heretofore.

Simultaneously, Allied forces in New Guinea brought the hat same afternoon when Meegan had taken the children home and gone down to the beach to swim she found Toby and Erica grilling hamburgers over one of the several grills on the beach. Adele had come over to join them and they had eaten hamburgers and made jokes and laughed. Erica's sullen face softened and she was always looking at Toby. It was like "old times," Meegan thought. They were all having fun and laughing. They were laughing because Clare was away. When she came back as she always came back, they would laugh no more and Erica would look sullen again and Adele would swear again. Later Adele said, "She's a cute kid and crazy about Toby, God help her. But she's the only girl I've seen him with in ages who didn't look as if she spent her evenings undressing."

The same week Toby had done an astonishing thing; he took Erica to his home to have tea with his mother. Meegan had been at the beach with the children and when she came home, her mother said, Toby brought a girl to tea today. I do wish you and Toby would tell me about the new people on the island. I really should call on them. The girl Toby brought today was . . . well, a bit different but very sweet. She looked . . . foreign. Oh, dear, I do hope we don't get any dreadful foreigners here. But I am glad, dear, that you reminded me to polish the tea service."

Meegan could not remember the last time Toby had brought a girl to meet his mother. Visualizing the visit, she could see her mother poised and pretty and looking as she had been born to look, with Toby amused at it all and Erica afraid that she would make a mistake. But even if Erica had committed a trifling social error, Elinor McLean would not have been aware of it. She was too certain that the people who came to her house were incapable of social error. And on that Saturday evening Toby had taken Erica to the club to dance.

One Sunday afternoon Meegan was lying across her bed reading when she heard a car approach and stop. Getting up, she went to the window and saw Clare walking toward the house . . . Clare had come back. Of course . . . Clare always came back when the fear of her and the strange force of her were beginning to lessen. Why did her heart beat so? Because when she saw Clare so many things rushed at her, not the least of them the fact that she was Fayne's wife and because when she was with Fayne she felt that she lived asleep until he awakened her? She could see Erica's face tight again and Adele's face pinched, as if hate were a hand that disfigured her. She could hear no more of Toby's gay laughter because Clare, wearing a lemon colored dress, wal walking toward the house.

In the downstairs hall Clare called, "Hello! Is anyone home?"

"Yes, I am," Meegan said. She was wearing her pink sheekskin playsuit and she had hastily thrust her bare feet into the straw sandals. And she was trembling? Why? Why was she trembling?

"I'll come up," Clare said. "It's been years since I've been here but it's just the same . . . exactly the same."

Meegan met her in the hall. Clare came up the steps smiling, her black hair like an arrogant, shining wing. There was such a glow to her that the house with the faded wall paper looked shabbier by comparison. She looked refreshed as one does when one has slept long and well in a quiet place.

"Come in my room, Clare," Meegan said.

She led the way and Clare followed her, selecting the only comfortable chair in the room. Meegan lay across the bed again and closed the book she was reading.

"We wondered what had happened to you, Clare."

"I had to go out of town for a few days to a wedding. It was a beautiful wedding with one flaw that turned out to be funny. The organist was given the wrong cue and when he played the wedding march, the bride's mother, very fat and jolly, marched down the aisle . . . I've been meaning to come up to see your mother. How is she?"

"Mother? Oh, she's fine. She's just the same, too."

"Where is Toby?" Clare asked brightly, too brightly.

"I don't know. He didn't say where he was going when he left." Clare had come to see Toby . . . "You've come back to stay for the summer, haven't you?"

"Oh, yes, for the summer. Perhaps for the duration. That is, I suppose we'll take an apartment in Baltimore for the winter and Fayne will give up his small place in Washington and commute daily."

Meegan said, "The war is unsettling so many people. At the beginning of the summer we scarcely felt it here. It sort of creeps in and takes charge of you."

"I hate all of this change. It bores me. Everywhere now the workingman is florified. Buy this and that, the billboards scream, because it will give you more energy for your work. Put on a uniform and go out and get yourself killed. And the people are getting poorer and poorer. It's very dull."

"It's duller for those who are getting poorer."

Clare stirred restlessly in the chair and looked out the window. She fingered her silver cigaret case and car keys and the pearl buttons on her dress. It was obvious to Meegan that she did not wish to pursue the subject of the changes that national defense and Hitler had wrought in her country. Yet other thoughts, other subjects for conversation were stopped at their source by the mind-filling beauty of Clare and the curious repellance of her. She would shrink at Clare's touch, Meegan knew, and she found it difficult to look directly at her. There was something in the glance of the bright and shining Clare comparable to the mesmerizing one feels when looking into the eyes of a cat.

Finally she said, "I'm reading 'Berlin Diary.' Have you read it?"

Clare looked at her with annoyance. "I never read anything . . . which makes me a completely uninformed person." Her eyes narrowed when she asked sharply, "Meegan, what are you doing for yourself?"

Meegan looked up with a start.

Clare said, "Why didn't you let me know you were in such miserable circumstances? I could have helped you. You could have come abroad."

"I have my mother."

"Hasn't anyone wanted to marry your mother?"

"Mother hasn't thought of marrying anyone."

Clare's face softened a little. "You see, you aren't doing anything for yourself. I don't want to offend you. But it seems to me that you are being wasted . . . you and Toby . . . an unnecessary waste."

"Toby is going into a defense plant in the fall."

BETTY BOLESKY WEDS CADET ZIMMERMAN

Announcement Made of Nuptial Vows Read July 24 In California for Young Mansfield Couple; Bride to Reside Here.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN BOLESKY, 95 South Linden road, are announcing the marriage of their daughter, Betty, to William Burton Zimmerman, aviation cadet, son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. James L. Zimmerman, 189 Cline avenue. The double ring service was held Saturday, July 24, at 2 o'clock at the Axton chapel, Santa Ana, Cal., where the bridegroom is stationed.

Lieut. Ivan O. Gonser, chaplain, read the nuptial vows in the presence of army friends of the couple. Wedding music was played by the organist. Attending the couple were Aviation Cadet T. Norman Wilkinson and Mrs. Wilkinson.

For her wedding the bride chose a navy and white wool suit trimmed with embroidery. Her accessories were white and completing her costume was a corsage of orchids and stephanotis. Mrs. Wilkinson wore a rose frock with navy accessories. Her corsage was of gardenias and stephenotis.

Both young people are graduates of Mansfield Senior high school. The new Mrs. Zimmerman is employed as a secretary at the Mansfield Senior high school. Cadet Zimmerman was a student at Purdue university before entering service. For the present the bride will reside with her parents.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Dicky, gave me a twisted grin, although his eyes were still filled with anxiety.

"You're the world's most gifted cock-eyed liar!" he said. "You're as scared as I am for you, and that's something. But take my blessing, and trot along. But just one more thing, before I dodge back into the room and you open the door."

He stopped, and when he began speaking again his words were packed with emphasis.

"Remember, I'm going to leave this door the least bit ajar, so that I can get to you in nothing flat if she tries any funny business. If she asks you who's in here, you might tell her that you guess I've come up here to see a doctor. Tell her I asked you to leave the door unlatched because I expected room service to send me up something to eat, and didn't want to get out of my chair to open the door. Tell her I'm pretty feeble, although I'm not so old.

Yarn Must Check.

"We'll have to make that yarn click," he went on, obviously warming to his work. "So before you do anything else, nip into one of those empty rooms, close the door and telephone room service, saying the gent in 1718 asked you to order some orange juice and toast and tea sent up to him as soon as possible."

Despite my anxiety, I had to smile at Dicky's face, which reflected utter distaste for the invalid fare he was ordering.

"When it's time to take the tray out, I'll bellow 'Maid!' and you'd better come a-running," he went on. "Then I'll tell you, and you can relay it to her in a complaining sort of way if she asks, that I want the door left ajar again, so that if I have to call you, I won't have to get up from my chair or the bed. And I'll call you again, never fear. In that way, I'll have a dandy chance to check on what she's doing."

"You're sure she won't recognize your voice?" I asked doubtfully.

"Think back," he urged me. "When I bellowed at you this morning, would you have recognized my voice if you hadn't known who it was?"

"No, I wouldn't," I told him with sincerity.

"Then rest in peace," he said. "I may not be in your class as a Thespian, but I can manage to bellow "Maid!" in a voice not recognizable as mine. And that's all the speech she'll hear from me. Now beat it, old dear!"

He kissed me again, hard, and then stepped behind the door while I opened it, sprang the latch, leaving it ajar, and hurried out. Leaving my carpet sweeper, pail and other implements, in the "Exit" passageway, I hurried across to one of the extra rooms, where I gave Dicky's order to room service. When I had finished, the operator struck in:

"Aren't you the one who telephoned about switching that message to 1718?" she inquired.

"Yes, I am," I replied screwing up my courage to hear whatever she might tell me, for it was evident that she had something important on her mind.

Ruth Gets Busy.

"Then perhaps you'd like to know that 1720 has been busy on the hotel telephones ever since. She queried the desk to know if a friend of hers, Mrs. Graham, whom she said she was expecting, had yet arrived. When she got 'no' for an answer she told them Mrs. Graham might not give her own name, so she described her at length. She asked to have the desk call her when her friend came in, and to give her the number of the room assigned to Mrs. Graham. She explained that for certain reasons Mrs. Graham would not wish to call until she called first."

"What did the desk tell her," I asked through dry lips.

"Told her they'd telephone her the minute any one answering her description registered."

"Oh, but they mustn't!" I gasped.

"Don't worry, they won't," the operator assured me. "She won't know anything she's not supposed to know, and that isn't okayed by the folks running this show. But I thought you'd like to know what she was up to."

"Indeed I do," I told her enthusiastically "and I'm infinitely obliged to you. Is there anything else you think I ought to know?"

"Yes" was the prompt reply. She also asked to have one of the house ducks sent up to 1720, but they stalled her on that, saying they were all busy. Then she got hold of the bell captain, and promised him a good tip if he'd find out whether a woman answering the description she gave had come into the hotel. I guess that's all, but I thought you ought to hear about it."

"Thank you so much," I said gratefully and hanging up the receiver, hurried out into the hall.

"Duration Silhouette" Launched By Stylists

By DOROTHY ROE
(AP Fashion Editor)

With all the fanfare of pre-war Paris, America's "duration silhouette" has been formally launched, to the combined applause of press, public and Uncle Sam.

Straight, narrow and streamlined, the WPB-approved "body basic" styles for fall are the fashion industry's answer to the threat of clothes rationing. By trimming every non-essential inch from the silhouette, astute designers have affected such vast savings of fabric that there probably will be no necessity for further government restrictions.

In the New York fall fashions openings, just completed, practically all the big-name designers went far beyond WPB requirements in the matter of conservation. Most of the new dresses and suits are shorter than the decreed 17 inches from the floor, narrower than the regulated 78 inches in width, adorned with less than the permitted 700 square inches of trimming.

But Mrs. America is not going to miss her dirndls, draperies, flounces and ruffles. So perfectly in step with the times are the new streamlined fashions that the full skirts and folderols of pre-war days look distinctly out of date.

SILHOUETTE

There is a rectangular look to the new silhouette, achieved through high, wide shoulders and pencil slim skirts. Ben Reig, one of New York's key designers, calls it the "spy glass silhouette," shows clothes that form a narrow rectangle from shoulder to waist, a narrower rectangle below.

A hint of the post-war styles of 1920 is evident in some of the collections, such as that of Norman Norell, who shows beltless chemise dresses as simple as those Schiaparelli designed for jazz-age belles. But there is an important difference. Today's chemise dress is carefully fitted to the figure, accents the waistline with or without belt. Broad shoulders serve to minimize the hipline, and the final effect is slender and flattering, a state of affairs definitely not true of the shapeless potato-sack styles that followed the first World war.

The Russian and Chinese influences are important in all the big collections. There are many high, collarless necklines and slanting closings, such as distinguish the clothes of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek. There are Russian blouses and Cossack turbans, and much Oriental bead embroidery on both coats and dresses.

Top designers concentrate interest above the belt in their fall collections, showing dozens of ingenious ways of achieving a look of easy fullness while staying within government restrictions. Flanges, tucks, rows of stitching and appliqued designs accentuate the wide shoulder line of the new dresses, while surface ornamentation removes all hint of austerity.

New in the fashion lineup are fur-bordered dresses, fur-lined coats, short evening dresses that glitter like a neon sign. Increasingly important is the use of accessories designed as a part of the costume—bead and sequin embroidered babushka scarfs with evening dresses, contrasting gloves, muffs, handbags and hair ornaments to add variety to basic dresses.

Sure-fire hits of the coming season are Jo Copeland's sequin-trimmed suit with matching bowtie, Norell's fur-lined trench coat and Clarepotter's "hug-me-tight" jecket in brilliant jockey silks worn over a basic black wool dress.

Parties Continue For Miss Arnett, Bride-Elect

Continuing the lovely pre-nuptial parties for Miss Mary Arnett, bride-elect, was the one given last evening at the home of Mrs. Clarence Marks, 205 Helen avenue. The nuptial vows will be read at the First Lutheran church.

Bridge was the diversion of the evening at three tables with score gifts being won by Miss Helen Hursh and Miss Margaret Oswalt, who presented them to the honoree.

The group surprised her with a shower of miscellaneous gifts. At a late hour a luncheon was served at one long table attractive with appointments in yellow and white. The hostesses gave the bride-elect a gift of crystal.

Nuptial Vows Read July 21 In Hopkinsville

Mrs. June Zediker of Mansfield, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mills of Hopkinsville, were the attendants for the couple.

The bride wore a printed silk jersey with white accessories for her wedding.

Mrs. Sims was graduated from Mansfield Senior high school and is employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. Pvt. N THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

)ALERMO, Sicily—(By Wireless, Delayed)—In a couple of hours of wandering around the ghost-ke ruins of Palermo's harbor one gathers further nvincing evidence of the irresistible force of air-ower when thrown in with determination and olume.

For throughout the entire semicircle of the arbor there is complete destruction. Twisted hulls and sunken ships are scattered everywhere. Several ships were blown out of the water and left lying on the docks. In two places, at least, fairly large ships are lying thus in pairs, flat on their sides up on the piers, as if some giant hand had scooped them up out of the water and dropped them there to dry, like dead fish.

Clapper

The waterfront is lined with five- and six-story houses, not one of which is now habitable. Many are completely demolished. Others, for a pace of three or four blocks back, will need to be ompletely rebuilt, because although the walls are ill standing they have been wrenched and cracked eyond repair. The city hall, an impressive struc-ire where a lieutenant colonel of the Amgot has aken over as administrator of civilian affairs, will eed fundamental reconstruction before it is sound gain.

One important point about this is that all the amage was done in the face of the most effective nti-aircraft defense in Sicily. The Germans had xcellent flak defense. We lost planes, but they ut the place out of business.

Three of us wandered over the empty docks. ot a soul was there except a couple of American ilitary guards at the gates, and two old men tting in the shade of a shattered building looking ut blankly at the devastation. We heard occa-onal rifle fire, as if snipers were busy, although e never had any other evidence of such activity of a hostile attitude. Otherwise there was only eathly silence.

The Italians had left the place apparently less an 24 hours before we got there. We found the eeping rolls of Italian guards at one point on the ocks, as if they had been left in a hurry during the night. Several army blouses were piled care-lessly beside the filthy mattresses, as though the soldiers had fled without taking time to dress. There was no accumulation of dust on them, so obviously they had been left there only a few hours before.

Several canteens and bottles were lying around, a dozen or so hand grenades, and a few clips of bullets, but most pathetic of all was a small ma-chine gun protected by a little stack of wood piled up out of eighth-by-eight timber scraps. The gun was pointed out to sea as if its crew had expected an attack from the water, although that little peashooter would have stopped nothing larger than a rowboat.

We walked through empty shipyards with partly built ships on two of the ways. I say empty yards, but the yards were empty only of workmen. There were tools, stacks of plates and piles of steel shapes in place as if for the next day's work. One crane and a flatcar of plates were standing on tracks in the yard. The whole place appeared as if the workmen had suddenly dropped their tools and left, but there was heavy rust over everything, so it could not have been recent.

We walked carefully in the silence of this ghostly place, always fearing booby traps or snipers. Finally we spotted two men peering out of the doorway of a building. We stopped, and they came out, obviously friendly. One of them proved to be the chief of the harbor workers' union, and the other a night watchman. They were living in the place.

We gave them some cigarets. They said the shipyard stopped working last March because the men refused to stay under the bombing. The har-bor has been little used since the middle of March, they said.

No wonder. At least 150,000 people have fled from Palermo, which has a normal population of 400,000. No wonder the Italians welcomed the Americans with cheers.

An ironic footnote on our walk through the ghostly waterfront is that at all the street open-ings coming into the harbor area were new stone barriers with firing slits so that Palermo could be better defended against attack from the sea. The barricades were all intact, like low thresholds over which airpower could walk in.

KRUG, GERMAN FLIER, MAKES SECOND ESCAPE

Climbs Seven-Foot Fence Clad In Swim Trunks, Canada Authorities Baffled.

(By International News Service)

DETROIT — Hans Peter Krug, 23, Nazi aviator whose escape from a prison detention camp in Canada more than a year ago led to America's first treason indict-ment of World war II, has escaped again and was hunted by Canad-ian and American authorities in this area today.

Krug's second escape was re-ported by Detroit police and John S. Bugas, head of the federal bu-reau of investigation in Detroit.

The elusive Nazi flyer was be-lieved to have been wearing only a pair of blue swimming trunks when he fled from the officers' de-tention camp at Gravenhurst, Ont., authorities said. His second es-cape was not noticed by prison of-ficials until he failed to answer roll call late yesterday.

According to Gravenhurst auth-orities, Krug was a member of a swimming party which went to the prison pool each afternoon under surveillance of several guards.

At 3 p. m. yesterday he was missed from the party.

Authorities declared that he was not anywhere on the prison grounds, but expressed astonish-ment at his escape. To leave the pool, Krug had to climb over a fence almost seven feet tall in the presence of the Canadian guards.

"Candidly, we are baffled how he did it. But he did," authorities said.

Krug first escaped from the de-tention camp at Bowmanville, Ont., April 16, 1942. Two days later he made his way to Detroit where he was given shelter by Max Stephan, 49, German-born restaurant operator who subse-quently was tried for treason and sentenced to death in the first treason conviction in the nation during the present war.

Stephan's death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by President Roosevelt who stated he thought the penalty too severe for the offense committed.

QUIET RETURNS TO HARLEM, BUT POLICE WATCH

Five Dead, 545 Injured, Many Held For Burglary After Wild Rioting.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Order returned to New York's Harlem today but au-thorities remained on the alert to prevent a possible recurrence of yesterday's rioting which left in its wake five persons dead, 545 in-jured, 509 arrests and an estimat-ed $5,000,000 in property damage.

As 6,000 police and 1,500 mem-bers of the city patrol corps pa-trolled the streets only a few iso-lated disturbances were reported last night in the heavily-populated negro section where:

A 10:30 p. m. curfew was put into effect clearing the streets of virtually all but police.

Bars and package liquor stores were closed and theaters empty.

The war-time dim-out was lift-ed.

The only activity in addition to the patrolling police and volun-teers was repair work being done to stores damaged during yester-day's looting.

Motor vehicle traffic was prac-tically at a standstill.

Approximately 8,000 state guardsmen from New York and three adjacent counties were or-dered to their armories for drill last night.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey said no formal request for mobilization had been made, but it was report-ed officials believed it wise to have the guardsmen on duty.

A majority of those arrested yes-terday were accused of burglary—outgrowth of the looting. Matthew J. Eder, executive secretary of the uptown Chamber of Commerce, es-timated that looting and damage caused to stores would cost mer-chants $5,000,000.

The widespread disorders were touched off early Sunday night af-ter a policeman shot and slightly wounded a negro soldier who, po-lice said, attempted to interfere with the arrest of a negro woman.

-AIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

JEW YORK—A short time ago, while Mrs. Roose-velt was in Seattle on another of her many urneys of urgent national necessity, her attention as caught by a remark of an unnamed authority, engineer, who was quoted in a San Francisco iper to the effect that the rules of certain unions ere restricting the production of some of the orkers in war industries.

"Sometimes I wonder whether we have a right to indict a whole group of peo-ple without using our own names so that they may answer direct-ly," Mrs. Roosevelt wrote.

Pegler

This wondering is consistent with the First Lady's specula-tion of a few days earlier as to whether the American people were really ready for popular self-government, or, as she calls it, democracy. If we are not ready for it, then of course, it is quite all right to suppress anonymous expressions of opin-n, although some of the most effective voices gainst tyranny in the historic development of our eedoms have been those of writers who adopted en names because they knew they would be killed id their protests stifled if their identity was nown. Indeed, some of labor's fighters against ppression in days gone by went underground for is same reason and today by contrast, some of ir industrial managers feel that it is perilous to nce opinions against the domestic administration id policies and some of the personalities of Mrs. oosevelt's government.

As Frank Knox once pointed out, they are vare of the threat of "investigation" by New Deal mmittees of congress, castigation by Harold Ickes harassment by the belligerent bailiffs of the ternal revenue and, as he might have added, ary of reprisals by any of a number of federal gencies having to do with labor questions.

But Mrs. Roosevelt's wonderment about the ropriety of anonymity, indeed her doubt of a tizen's right to take precautions against unde-rved punishment, moves me to wonder whether she has ever taken exception to the use of aliases by publicists of her own political wing, because if so I must have missed her contribution to the sum of human wisdom on that day. I have in mind instantly two writers who for years have presented in very aggressive language, reminiscent of Vir-ginio Gaydo, arguments, distortions and denuncia-tions along the New Deal party line under names other than those which they were born with. Why they do this I have no idea because they have never stood in danger of punishment from Mrs. Roosevelt's party and one, in fact, was rewarded for his vigorous regularity and ingenius casuistry by a profitable engagement on the radio.

Being much more liberal and tolerant than Mrs. Roosevelt and more confident of our capacity for popular government, I would not deny any person of Mrs. Roosevelt's wing or her personal political following the right to use an adopted name for any purpose, provided, of course, that the laws be complied with. I don't even mind complete an-onymity, as in the case of the engineer whose remark evoked Mrs. Roosevelt's doubt. The name or the lack of any name of an idea or an argu-ment or allegation cannot affect its validity. The question here was not who said it but whether the charge was true but if it would help to get an honest decision on the merits of the thing I would be glad to take the affirmative in the place of the timid engineer, who could have very good reasons for his anonymity, and present facts in support thereof. Unlike some journalists of Mrs. Roose-velt's following, I have always put my own name and no other on top of my pieces ever since I was given a by-line.

Mrs. Roosevelt's OWI also has been guilty late-ly, or, rather guilty for quite some time but only lately exposed in, a flagrant job of ghosting where-by opinions and other propaganda usually of Red-dish tinge were radioed to the enemy countries in the name of a fictitious savant called John Durfee, billed to the Europeans as "The Voice of America."

To that I might object but for a hope that the accumulation of such impudence and effrontery presently will so affect the people whose capacity for self-government Mrs. Roosevelt has impugned that they will take appropriate actions at the polls.

RULES REVIEWED

Food Retailers Warned Against Tie-up Merchandise Sales.

Mansfield food retail dealers were warned against using tie-up sales in their stores by E. J. Champion of the Office of Price Administration in Cleveland at a meeting for retailers last night at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Champion told dealers that they are not to make custom-ers purchase one article in or-der to be able to get another one that they might want.

Approximately 150 dealers were present for the meeting at which time the community flat prices which will be put into effect Thursday were discussed.

Bulletins concerning the per-centage of mark-ups for items that are not under the commun-ity price plan were distributed. Retailers who were not present may obtain these from the ration board office, officials said.

Peeps Replace Shakespeare's Sonorous Lines

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— One of the capital's swankiest hotels, the Shoreham, tenanted by many of the city's great and near-great, has been granted a license to raise chickens in one of its build-ings previously given over to teaching Shakesperean drama.

Permission to transfer to the building 4,000 chickens now cheep-cheeping happily in the Shoreham basement was grant-ed by the District health offi-cer, Dr. George C. Ruhland. When the chicks get bigger, they will again be moved—this time to a 150-acre Maryland farm recently bought by the hotel.

The Shorearm went into the poultry business to supply its own sizeable needs because of current shortages. Any fear of tenants that they might be awakened by roosters crowing was dispelled to-day by a hotel official, who said, "about the time the chickens get their voices they will be memories of a pleasant dinner."

CHARLEVOIX CRASH PROBED

'At Least Six' Dead In Fall of Training Plane.

DAYTON — (U.P.) — A board of inquiry left today for Charlevoix, Mich., to conduct an investiga-tion into the cause of a crash of a twin-engined training plane in which the public relations office at Wright Field said "at least six persons" were killed.

The plane crashed at the Charlevoix airport at 4:15 p. m. yesterday, Wright Field an-nounced.

The identities of three of the victims were announced. They included: Lieut. Col. John E. Da-vis, 51, of Columbus, O.; Capt. Wendell P. Lester, 33, of La Cygne, Kan.; and W. W. Cum-mins, a civilian employe at Wright Field whose brother lives at Solon, O.

BERGEN, CHARLIE OWN THAT JAIL

But What They'll Do With Much-Discussed Hoosegow Remains Big Problem.

LOS ANGELES —(U.P.)— Edgar Bergen and his loquacious pal Charlie McCarthy, sought advice today on how to run a jail.

"I'm beginning to wonder if we're a bunch of dummies," Ber-gen said.

He was referring to his pur-chase of the town jail at Har-vard, Neb. He and Charlie bought the jail for $10,000 in war bonds.

The radio team acquired their new piece of real estate from 16-year-old Robert Pinckney of Har-vard. Young Pinckney had come into possession of the property at an auction sale when city of-ficials let him have it for $1.50 by mistake.

McCarthy, pocketing the deed made out in his name, promised that "short term ten-ants will be charged exorbitant rates. Lifers and habitual ten-ants will get special rates," he said.

Bergen, however, was reticent about discussing his plans for the jail.

"I understand the Harvard city council has been using it for a couple of their regular custom-ers," he worried. "I don't know whether we can get rent or not."

"Harvard will go down in his-tory for providing the greatest jail treatment of all time," Mc-Carthy said.

"As a matter of fact, Harvard will become more famous than Yale."

Maybe you've been thinking that with most of the young fellows marching away to war the Y. M. C. A. would be "going out of busi-ness." But that's not the case. The records show that there are enough under-18-and-over-38ers to keep the membership almost up to normal. Ralph Chapman, "Y" secretary, says many mem-bers of draft age work out daily to be in condition when and if they receive their call to arms. He re-ports a membership of 714 includ-ing 306 senior members (17 years and up), 237 junior members (high, junior high and grade school age), and 171 group mem-bers, persons belonging to clubs affiliated with the "Y."

Painted stockings are fine until it rains, Mansfield's lo-tion-limbed gals decided today. All over town girls caught in the storm with those "no-run" hose found they do run when raindrops collect and leave be-hind them a washed-off streak. If you saw some of these un-fortunate females walking in the rain today their downcast glances were not meant to be coy, the girls were trying to see what the rain was doing to those "stockings" they had la-bored over so hard this morning.

SETS TENTH RECORD

MIDDLETOWN — (U.P.) — The American Rolling Mill Co., today reported that its Hamilton, O., plant has set its 10th monthly pro-duction record in 16 months by producing 1,581 more tons of pig iron in July topping the previous high established in May.

WLB TO HEAR LEWIS TODAY

UMW Chief Scheduled to Plead For Fatter Pay Envelope For Miners.

WASHINGTON — John L. Lewis was booked for a personal appearance today before the war labor board to plead the United Mine Workers' case for a fatter wartime pay envelope.

The union president, who alter-nately ignored or defied the board for nearly five months, submitted for approval an agreement with the Illinois Coal Operators asso-ciation which provides for portal-to-portal pay and an extra hour's production work at time and a half rates. Together they would amount to $2.75 or more a day, the concessions granted previous-ly by the WLB—free tools and equipment—would bring the total to about $3.

Lewis' about-face offer to ap-pear followed enactment of the labor disputes act which gave the WLB subpena power.

The miners offered the Illinois contract as a "model" that could be applied to the entire soft coal industry which has had three walkouts over the wage dispute this year. President Roosevelt took over the mines in the name of the government and put In-terior Secretary Ickes in charge of continued production for the war effort, after appealing to the men to go back to work and thresh out their demands over the bargaining table.

The proposed contract presum-ably would not increase the oper-ators' net costs.

The proposed contract does not provide in so many words for a wage rate increase, which the board has said it cannot grant under the wage stabilization program.

Firemen Out In Downpour To Put Out Pants Blaze

Milo Bridges, 305 West Fourth street, had just arrived home from work in a Mansfield defense plant and gone to bed when two fire trucks and a ladder wagon thundered to a stop at his home during a downpour of rain at 8:30 this morning.

Firemen ran inside, looking for the flames. Bridges point-ed to a small heap of smoking cloth in his bedroom. The em-bers were all that remained of Bridges' trousers which he had placed on a chair beside his bed when he retired.

Smoke filled the room, but Bridge had the fire under con-trol. There was no damage, ex-cept to the trousers. Bridges told firemen he couldn't understand how the fire started, for he was sure his trousers were not burn-ing when he removed them.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

(Note: Florence Eldredge and Fredric March re spending their vacation from Broadway hard it that new American pastime—farming. Mrs. March has played hookey from the hen house n Connecticut long enough to tell about it here. —D. K.)

lorence Eldridge Says:

M BEGINNING to understand Marie Antoinette's pathetic dalliance at the Petit Trianon. She must ve been trying in her reeling world to bind her-lf to the earth for greater security. It didn't save er head, but it must have given her a few hopeful ours. I have a hunch that maybe if she had not id so many hired men at her beck and call and id to work her farm herself she might even have rvived the French revolution.

It's a toss-up here whether we are learning about rvival or our farm is learning how to survive us.

You see, this experiment began two years ago. 'e'd just done "Hope for a Harvest" and while ie play didn't impress the critics or audiences, it npressed us so much that we wanted to play our rts in real life.

We had another motive. We'd sat so long in a oup of worriers, seeing another way of living ad-ancing and secretly feeling that perhaps we weren't eady to cope with it, that what we sought was adventure in coping.

The first week-end was a honey. Freddie made great roaring fire and spent the next hour hosing own the roof, to keep the sparks from burning it f, then disappeared into the brush with a huge id very sharp scythe. I opened Escoffier's cook ok only to find that I didn't even understand the rms and anyway there was no brown stock, white ock or dry white wine in the house. So from then I was on my own.

The children loyally applauded my horrible esses but that night when I tucked them into bed found that they had taken our measure accu-rately. Pennie, then aged nine, put her arms around me and said "Mummie, I just love you—you with that cook book and Daddy with that scythe."

We survived the winter by the skin of our teeth. We learned not to wince when the hired man greeted us in sweet gentle tones each morning as day broke, with "Mr. March, your pipes is frozen," and by winter's end I had learned to cook and Freddie, who had always thought that he couldn't drive a nail in butter, could get a warped door off its hinges and plane it with the best of men and handle balky furnaces and gas water heaters with an air. The first stage was over.

Then we went off to California and came back and did "Skin of Our Teeth" and had neither gas nor fuel to go on with our adventure. But as the winter thawed, we began to lay our plans to de-velop the farm.

Hearing that there were no chickens to be bought in New Milford and no labor to build a chicken house we sallied forth and invested in a prefabricated house, 15 layers and fifty three-week-old chicks for eating. For three days the New Mil-ford station was in an uproar. Hens escaped and laid eggs on the counter and were generally troublesome: a good neighbor moved them to his farm until we could be reached in town for further instructions.

A group of boys from the high school assembled the house, and when we arrived our birds joined us. For two long weeks we had nary an egg but once we discovered the hens had been getting growing—instead of laying—mash things began to happen and now we get fourteen eggs a day. Only one hen is holding out.

Last week Freddie committed his first murder in the chicken house and has an axe gash on his hand to prove it. He is our hero and now I know how his fans feel about him.

Coach Paul Brown is "high" on the former Canton McKinley Bulldogs on his kid football squad at Ohio State, as you'd expect a Massillon man to be after what the Bulldogs did to the Tigers last autumn.

Well, the people here in Mansfield think right well of those Bulldogs too, for good and sufficient reason which we hardly need elucidate. But there was a lot of similarity in the way the Bulldog treated the Tyger and the Tiger last fall.

During a round of golf at Canton recently, Brown declared he is counting on these ex-Bulldogs this year: Jack Dugger, who is also a former Mansfielder, Red Williams, Jasper Harris, Ernie Parks and Matthew Brown.

"Naturally," said Brown, "we expect Dugger to see full service, as he is one of the six boys on our squad who saw action last year."

There was no indication that Brown would use his veterans for six-man-football.

Brown made it clear that the other Canton boys "haven't won definite assignments, but I can say we are very happy to have them with us. They should be a big help to the team, judging from their work the last few weeks. However a lot can happen before we start practice Sept. 1."

Regarding big Ernie Parks, Brown said, "He's a fast boy, although he did have a little trouble hanging onto that ball when we shot it to him. However I'm certain Ernie will overcome that difficulty and improve his getaway. We had him throwing a few passes, too, and he's not bad, either."

The Buckeye mentor said he had "paid particular attention to Matthew Brown, inasmuch as I knew him as an opponent when I was at Massillon. I have always regarded him as a great competitor and he's just that. Matt is a good example of the type of boys we like to have on our squad. He's a fine thinker, too, both on the field and in the classroom.

"Harris and Williams gave a good account of themselves especially in our test game. Red, as you know, was away from the game for a year, but he is a terrific worker and he'll be ready as soon as the others. Jasper doesn't hurt our speed any, you know, and we'll have to have a lot of it this fall when we hit those tough teams.

"Of course, I'm assuming we'll be able to field a team," concluded Brown. "You can't tell, though, it's a long time before our first game."

Appling Aims At Batting Crown

NEW YORK—(AP)—Luke Appling, the Chicago White Sox "man who came back," is leading the American league hit parade today and aiming at the batting championship he held seven years ago.

The shortstop veteran tore opposing pitchers apart during the past week, thumping out 18 hits in 40 trips to the plate to boost his average 14 points, all the way to .331, and replace Rookie Dick Wakefield of the Detroit Tigers in the No. 1 slot among the junior circuit hitters. Wakefield fell off five points during the week to .321, for second place.

Newcomers to the top ten clouters after the past week's walloping were Nick Etten of the Yankees, Pete Fox of the Boston Red Sox and Wally Moses of the Chicago White Sox.

Stan Musial, the St. Louis Cardinals' "rhythm swinger," remained ten points in front of his nearest National league rival—Brooklyn Billy Herman—although he dropped six points during the week to .340—geting nine hits in 33 times at bat. Biggest surge of the week saw Arky Vaughan of the Dodgers climb from sixth place to a tie for third with .313.

Legion Tourney In Third Round

COLUMBUS — (INS) — The Columbus Post Legion squad engages Cleveland today in a morning game, a part of the American Legion baseball tournament.

The Columbus team, riding high on two four-hit pitching efforts by their mound aces, Hecker and Donnelly took both ends of a double header yesterday. In the first game Elyria fell, 7 to 2, and then the Columbus team shut out Zanesville, 3 to 0, in the second encounter.

Cincinnati, defending champions of the tournament, split a double-bill winning the first from Springfield, 2 to 0, but losing the second contest to Cleveland, 1 to 0.

Warren won a 12-inning encounter from Portsmouth, 10 to 9, in the afternoon round.

Browns Flop In Flag Race

Stephens' Big Bat Doesn't Boom Any More.

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

IF MESSRS. William Cox and Bucky Harris will step into the laundry closet or some such sanctuary to continue their debate on just who is the "All American Jerk," the meeting will take up the rise and fall of the Brownies of St. Louis. Especially the fall.

For, what has happened to the Brownies of late should happen to your mother-in-law. A couple of weeks ago, they zoomed into the American league's first division and were bouncing along merrily.

Then the bubble busted—and Luke Sewell suddenly found out there's nothing to laugh about. Or can you see something funny in seventh place? — Because that's exactly where the Brownies are after having dropped their fifth straight decision, a 4-3 shiner pinned on them by Southpaw Milt Haefner and the Washington Senators last night.

Milt's six-hit win put Washington in a virtual second place tie with the Chicago White Sox in the American league, since James Joseph Dykes' Windy City warriors had a lot of the wind taken out of them in Philadelphia. There the Athletics put on a two-run rally in the eighth to take a 5-3 verdict, which left the Nats only one percentage point out of the second slot. In the only other big league lawn party, Frankie Gustine singled home a ninth-inning marker to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-4 win over the Boston Braves and move the Bucs up to ½ games away from the St. Louis Cardinals in the National league parade.

The Brownies' five game losing streak isn't even the half of it. They've now blown 12 out of 16 since they hit fourth place on July 17.

The vivisection society has decided the chief reason the Brownies have come apart is that Vern Stephens' bat has become a bouquet of sweet peas for Susie, for all the good it's done the Browns at the plate lately. In two weeks, his average has skidded from .336 right down to .302.

But that's hardly the only ailment. In that 16-game flopola, only three elbowers have managed to go the full nine innings.

For comic relief, however, yesterday's leading laugh came when Harris, the deposed manager of the Phillies, announced that, in his opinion, William (I used to play for Yale) Cox, the Phils' president, was "the All American Jerk." To which William replied that Bucky must have been looking in a mirror when he made the remark. Bucky, however, claims priorities. He said it first.

Birds Battle Kansas City

Enter Series Three Games Out of First.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — The Columbus Red Birds return to home stamping grounds tonight to meet the Kansas City Blues in a double bill that will be part of the "zoo night" program, an annual banner event that will likely be staged before the largest crowd of the season.

At present three games out of first place, the Birds hope to improve their position by sweeping the five game series from the improved Blues.

The program, with the first game starting at 6 o'clock, will be featured by between-game ceremonies, including the presentation of the No. 1 minor league manager of 1942 award to Eddie Dyer, pilot of last year's junior world champion Red Birds. The presentation will be made by Editor Edgar G. Brands of the Sporting News.

The Red Birds returned from their western trip were in a happy frame of mind. Manager Nick Cullop will make his pitching selections from either Bill Beckman, Preacher Roe, or Jack Creel.

The high-flying Birds have won 10 out of 17 contests in the recent western invasion by the eastern clubs, ending Sunday.

The program, sponsored by the Columbus Zoological society will start at 5:30 with a concert by Charlotte Rowe Gamble's all-accordion band. There will be several special stunts following the game, including a long distance hitting contest, featuring Cullop and Chet Wieczoreck, the Red Bird slugging outfielder.

BARNES WINS

Barnes edged Great Lakes 5-4 in an Industrial league softball game last evening at Library park. Box score on the postponed tilt was incomplete.

HYTONE CAPTURES PLANTATION STAKE

Tennessee walking horses from the Glenleigh Farms breeding plant were winners in the past week-end's horse show at Barberton conducted by the Barberton Service league for the benefit of wounded servicemen. After placing second Sunday afternoon Hytone, oft-time winner for Mr. and Mrs. S. Glen Vinson, came through in the evening to defeat the highly touted Sunshine Glow Boy for the championship plantation walking stake. In his first show another Glenleigh horse, "Trouble," was pinned third in the open class and stake. The Glenleigh entries were shown by Fred Norris and Paul Peay.

Rickey-Cox Secret Found

Takes Genius To Pull Stunts These Guys Do.

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK —(INS)— I guess everybody might just as well go ahead and admit that Branch Rickey and Bill Cox are geniuses and let it go at that.

Ordinary working stiffs like us can't be expected to understand what they are trying to prove because a genius does things that only another genius can add up. It is noteworthy that Rickey and Cox get along very well together in the operation of their baseball clubs, even though the clientele does sometimes wonder what they're driving at.

When Rickey took over the Dodgers everybody around here feared the worst, for by reputation preceding him out of St. Louis he was one of those geniuses who discovered the principle of firing successful managers and rebuilding from there toward the top by starting toward the cellar.

That's a little involved, I know, but so is the Einstein theory and you're not supposed to understand such things.

Arriving in the baseball empire strung along the banks of the dear old Gowanus, Rickey found himself in kind of a ticklish spot on the managerial question because Leo Durocher had been not only successful, but also beloved because of his boisterous ways with people and things like umpires. So Rickey didn't fire Durocher. He put him on probation with a player-manager contract permitting dismissal on 10 days' notice, then settled back and in due course started firing the whole team.

We have it figured out around here that by Christmas there won't be a Dodger left. Meantime, of course the remnants will finish out this season with a good old toboggan ride into the second division.

Those are the same Dodgers who won the pennant season-before-last and finished second last season with the greatest total of victories in the history of the club.

That just goes to show you what a genius can do in a few short months. Rickey has it figured out I guess that the Dodgers couldn't beat out the Cardinals for the pennant so the high-priced players might as well be dropped. But what's the matter with a bang up second, and the long chance that all the Cardinals will break their legs and let the Dodgers slip in to the World series even when all seems lost?

Then over at Philadelphia, we have the strangs case of Bill Cox starting out with the greatest promise of any genius to come into baseball in some time. He was winning more games than he had a right to expect for awhile and getting more customers than the Phils had seen in any ball park in years.

Some of the oldtime Phillies would just stand around there unable to take their hitting or fielding practice, standing and looking in dumb amazement at the customers pouring into the park. One of them wanted to know one day what was taking place after the ball game to bring all these people out.

"Must be going to have a 'Bobbycue' and free beer after we get out of the park," he speculated. "Some political speech-making with free trimmings, sure as your born."

Told that the people were out to see him and the Phillies play he swooned away, and had to be led away. He will get all right in time.

Cox, in the middle of all this, came to a misunderstanding with Manager Bucky Harris and at last reports was still writing eight-page documents on why Harris was fired.

So by this time Cox has very probably lost the support of his clientele, has made himself ridiculous with the press and public generally, and the farther he goes the worse he looks.

But as I was saying there is no explaining geniuses, especially when they start out for the cellar determined that nothing shall stop them.

But here is one for Rickey and Cox to figure out? How can they both get into the cellar at the same time, both being due to arrive there by next season at the latest?

Let the geniuses answer that one.

Mansfield Horse Takes Barberton Stake

Hytone, champion Tennessee walking horse owned by Mr. and Mrs. S. Glen Vinson of Glenleigh Farms, won the Plantation Stake in the Barberton horse show last week-end after placing second in the open class. Hytone has been a consistent open class and stake winner for three years. He was shown with a stable-mate half-brother, "Trouble," which placed third in the open and well up in the stake.

Notre Dame Plans Young Backfield

SOUTH BEND —(AP)— Notre Dame, preparing to carry on its great gridiron dynasty with a mixture of navy and marine students and seven 1942 lettermen, will spring one of its youngest backfields in history against football foes this fall.

John Lujack of Connellsville, Pa., will be a left half, Bob Kelly, hero of Chicago's City Prep champions, at right half, and Jules Rykovich of Gary, Ind., at fullback. Their average age is 18, and none has played in a college game.

They will support Angelo "Bombshell" Bertelli, the passing wizard who is the only regular in the monogram group. He will be around only for five games before being sent elsewhere for additional marine training.

"We don't have a chance for a great team—and that's not a professional moan," Coach Frank Leahy insisted today. "The powerhouses this year will be Michigan, Northwestern, Army and Navy. We meet all of them, too."

However, Leahy is going to stick to the T formation.

HOCKEY STAR DIES

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Don Deacon, who helped the Cleveland Barons capture the American Hockey league title in 1940, died in a Vancouver, (B. START GRID DRILLS

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Case university opened football practice today with 31 candidates reporting to Coach Ray Ride. Although Navy V-12 students are available, Coach Ride said that of 260 navy boys on the campus July 1, only one has had previous college gridiron experience.

HARRIS SILENT ON FUTURE IN BASEBALL

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Bucky Harris, who was recently cut loose as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, today said he had no immediate plans for a new baseball connection and declined to discuss reports that he may be manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers next year.

Harris, who returned to his home in Washington yesterday said he wanted to close the incident for the good of baseball.

Eyes Distance Swim Record

St. Louis Butcher Hopes To Beat Own Mark.

ST. LOUIS — (U.P.) — John Sigmund, 33-year-old butcher who sells meat to make a living but swims because he likes to, is planning today to set a new world's record for long-distance swimming.

The present record, held by Sigmund, was put into the book in July, 1940, when he swam 292 miles down the Mississippi river from St. Louis to Carruthersville, Mo. He took the crown from Clarence Giles of Billings, Mont., who did his swimming—288 miles—in the Yellowstone river two years previous.

Goal of the swimming meat cutter now is 408 miles—from St. Louis to Memphis, Tenn. He isn't certain when he'll make the journey.

"Conditions have to be just right. A little rain causes floating logs which may give a lot of trouble," says Sigmund. "I don't know for sure the day I'll start. It'll be this summer, that's for sure."

Sigmund knows Mississippi river water as well as that from the St. Louis city water tap in his meat shop. He's made three 23-mile jaunts down from Alton, Ill., to St. Louis—in 1938, 39 and 40. Each time he bettered his record, now five hours and 35 minutes, even though his hands were shackled to his sides by a belt during his '39 trip.

But he never loses his fear of logs. One sprang from a whirlpool and hit him on his four-day trek to Carruthersville. He was pulled from the water and treated for minor injuries.

Most dangerous part of that marathon exhibition, which timed at 89 hours and 53 minutes, was an alligator gar which tried to be unruly. A couple of shots from an accompanying boat took care of him. In all his splashing triumphants, his wife is one of those on the boat. The little woman feeds him chocolate bars and soap.

"After the first day I didn't remember anything," he tells of his longest trip. "Condition is what keeps me going. I exercise all the time—run about five or six miles a day—and eat a lot. But I don't drink or smoke."

Included in his diet of such foods as meats, salads and vegetables is a gallon of milk daily.

In spite of the fine fettle of the former boxer and minor league ball player, he takes a terrific beating when in the water. "It took me a year to recover from that long trip," Sigmund declares.

"When I was pulled from the water I was in a daze. My legs were terribly wobbly and my face was severely sunblistered. I was full of sore muscles and had lost 32 pounds."

Donelli Studies Brooklyn Offer

MONONGAHELA, Pa.— (U.P.)— Former Duquesne university football coach Aldo (Buff) Donelli indicated today that it would take him a week before he would reach a decision wether to join the coaching staff of the professional Brooklyn Dodgers.

Bonelli, who has currently been engaged in the tire re-capping business, conferred with Pete Cawthorn, head coach of the Dodgers, over an offer to become assistant Brooklyn mentor.

Indians Buy Young Hill Star

Claim 19-Game Winner From Baltimore Club.

BOSTON—(AP)—While the Cleveland front office announced its intention of claiming a 19-game winner from the Baltimore Orioles under a working agreement, the Indians returned to Boston today to end their eastern trip in a series finale with the Red Sox.

Vice President Roger Peckinpaugh announced in Cleveland last night the Indians would claim Ed (Specs) Klieman, Baltimore sinker ball sensation, under an arrangement which permits the Tribe to pick two Orioles, before Aug. 15 at a price not to exceed $10,000 apiece.

Klieman, 24-year-old Norwood, O., athlete, won 17, lost six from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, a Cleveland three-eye league farm last season, and was sold to the International league club for $750.

His record this year, fashioned largely with a sinker pitch that nosedives about 10 inches as it breaks over the plate, includes 19 triumphs and five losses. He is rated by the Oriole front office in the $50,000 class.

However, the bespectacled hurler's mother, Mrs. Fred Klieman, said at Norwood yesterday his draft board may make a prior claim on his services.

The Indians took a rest from Major league warfare yesterday and defeated a Boston coast guard nine 3 to 1 in an exhibition at Lynn, Mass.

Jim Bagby is slated to oppose Boston's Yank Terry in today's finale.

CINCINNATI— (AP) —The Cincinnati Reds finish up with the New York Giants today already having won three of the four game series.

Elmer Riddle, sporting the best pitching record on the Reds staff, will be trying for his fifteenth victory. He will be opposed by Harry Feldman, young righthander, who has been shelled from the mound twice this season by the Reds.

Mel Ott, Giants manager, indicated he would be back in the lineup at right field. Ott benched himself last week for light hitting but Buster Maynard, who replaced him, has been no improvement.

WACS LEARN TO TALK BRITISH AS HELLO GIRLS

It's 'Are You There?' In Place of 'Hello' Now That They Man Telephones.

(By United Press)

LONDON — Very American voices are answering telephones at eight American air forces stations in Britain today with the very British greeting "are you there?" The first group of communications WACS to reach England have completed a course in "speaking British and now are on the job.

During one busy week, they've learned to say "sorry, you're still connected but the other party appears to have left the phone," in place of "hold the line." They've also made the acquaintance of boys from their home states and have developed a wholesome appreciation for American elevator service which was lacking in their "communications campus" at the Mayfair mansion.

The business of meeting home state boys was almost automatic. The boys, who had been sighing all year for the sight of a girl from home, were on hand at Mayfair mansion doorstep even before the WACS arrived. And every man of the lot found there were girls from all 48 states and the District of Columbia among the 576 members of the first WAC battalion to reach England. The experience of Grace Atwood, of Newport News, Va., was a standout. She found Pvt. Johnny Powell, from her home town, sitting on the steps when she arrived.

Mary Pendergast, of Chicago, expressed the universal sentiments of the WACS when she said, "all of us have been impressed most by the friendliness of the British." She pointed out that the WAAF instructors at the telephone school brought out their strictly rationed candy for the WACS. The WAAFS in turn, have been equally impressed by the generosity of the Americans, who are passing out lipstick and rouge so recklessly that the WACS are threatened with a shortage themselves.

The $50 monthly pay of the WACS is nearly double that of British service women, but they explain that they are in a foreign country and that since they have no homes to visit, it costs them twice as much as the British women when they're on leave.

Since the WACS are forbidden to wear civilian clothing, British women have no fears that they will raid London dress shops. They've also learned that the American cotton stockings are no more snappy than those of the WAAF. This eliminates certain unvoiced fears of a competitive advantage for male attention.

The WACS stationed in Britain are filling a wide range of jobs from x-ray technician, represented by Eleanor Marple, of San Pedro, Cal., to secretaries and telephone operators. But the one thing they have in common is an intense enthusiasm for their jobs.

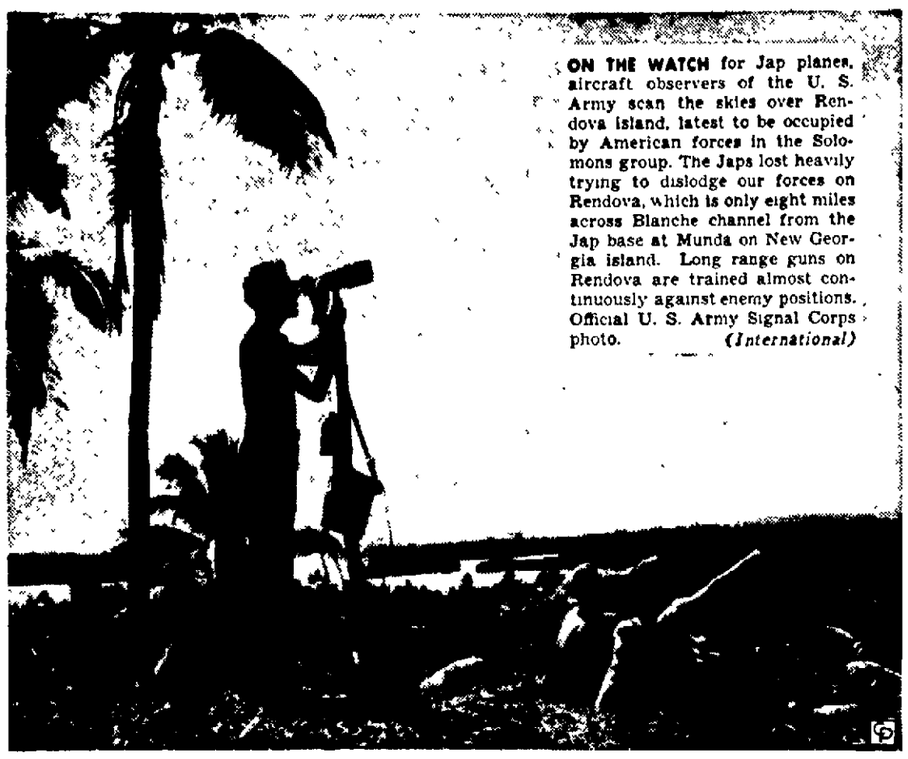
Plane Spotters On Rendova Trap Jap Zeros



ON THE WATCH for Jap planes, aircraft observers of the U. S. Army scan the skies over Rendova island, latest to be occupied by American forces in the Solomons group. The Japs lost heavily trying to dislodge our forces on Rendova, which is only eight miles across Blanche channel from the Jap base at Munda on New Georgia island. Long range guns on Rendova are trained almost continuously against enemy positions. Official U. S. Army Signal Corps photo. (International) producing and refining center had been cut by half at least.

(The German communique today declaring the attack on Ploesti "turns out ever more as a great failure," asserted 52 planes of the raiding force were "actually shot down" and 15 more forced to land in neutral territory.

(A United States announcement at Cairo said that 20 of about 175 American planes were shot down and that others were missing.)

LONDON — (AP) — The Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, quoted a Rumanian communique today as saying 116 persons were killed and 147 wounded in the raid by American Liberator bombers on the Ploesti oil fields in Rumania Sunday.

A Rome radio version of the Rumanian communique said 36 American planes had been shot down and that 66 crewmen had been captured.

A Cairo air communique yesterday acknowledged loss of 20 of the bombers participating in the raid.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, August 4.

Affairs generally are quickened and energized by the astral forces in operation on this day. It is a time for stepping up at lively pace, in all the affairs, business, domestic and social, to reap rewards from this propitious situation Bright and new ideas or clever projects may prove lucrative, and benefit by changes, travel, or new contracts or agreements, if good judgment rather than impulse warrant. A similar demand for initiative and enterprise are suggested in intimate relations, even though there be opposition from the elderly or sedate. Shun depressed reactions from this.

Those whose birthday it is may grasp many profitable and pleasant openings for good fortune and achievement, by use of energy, initiative and aggressive action if need be, also change of plans or programs. The same happy prospects may be obtained in private affairs, domestic, social, romantic, but do not be depressed or defeated by antagonisms from elders. Forge ahead with good cheer.

A child born on this day should possess initiative, independence and versatility, strong in creative expression Its intimate affairs should be similarly enterprising and progressive despite certain disheartening conflicts with elders.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

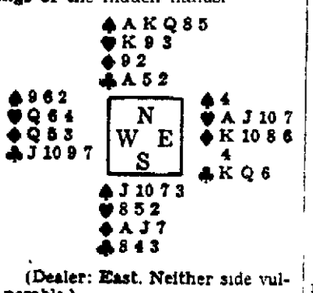
"The Authority on Authorities"

VARY YOUR METHOD

When leading the partner's bid suit against a trump contract, some players with three cards headed by an honor invariably choose the top card, and some always lead low as they would against No Trump contracts, so as to retain the honor for possible killing of a lower one in the declarer's hand. There are points in favor of both methods, but the best players have a change of pace in this regard, depending on how they size up the probable holdings of the hidden hands.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♦	Pass	Pass	Dbl
1 ♥	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠

Here was a case in which the lead of an honor cost the defense a trick. West opened the Q of his partner's diamonds, the A winning. A spade to the A was followed by the diamond 9, which East took with the K. He led the club K to the A, after which a spade to the J enabled South to lay down the now established diamond J for a discard of the club 2. This made it impossible for South to lose more than one trick in clubs, plus one in diamonds and three in hearts, so that he made his contract.

Notice that if West had led a small diamond, South could have taken only one trick in that suit, and so could not have discarded a losing club. He therefore would have been set, the decider being the fact that West's diamond Q waited for the J.

Take a look, however, at the heart suit. With the Q lead, the defenders would get three immediate tricks, whereas that could not be done with a small card lead. If the rest of the hands were a bit different, a small heart lead could cost the defense a trick.

If the honor in your partner's suit seems likely to be important for a re-entry, or if you think the declarer may have a lower honor which can be killed later, then the small card lead from three to an honor may prove best. In other cases, the honor lead probably will score better. With average players, used to the lead of highest of partner's suit, maybe that is safest against being misread. Whatever you do, use your judgment.

If you ever need $25, $50, $100 or more quickly and simply, come to Household Finance. If you have a job so that you can repay in small monthly payments, you are welcome to apply for any amount up to $1000. The sooner you repay the less your loan costs. Example: A $50 loan repaid in 6 monthly instalments of $9.24 each costs $5.44—if repaid in one month the cost is only $1.50. No endorsers or guarantors are ever needed. We never make inquiries of friends or relatives.

STILL POPULAR

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont.—(INS)—Bridegrooms have always brought their brides to Niagara Falls, but these days most of the grooms are in uniform. As many wedding couples as ever are spending honeymoons at the popular border resorts, and they include a great variety of uniforms—U. S. Canadian, and RAF, as well as those of several of the United Nations who have training stations in Ontario, and many of whom are marrying Canadian girls.

About 40,000 paper cups are used daily in the ten lunch bars in the war department's Pentagon building.

HIGHER LEVELS REGISTERED BY STOCK MARKET

Some Issues Pick Up Point After Dropping Sharply In Monday Trading.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks reached slightly higher levels in today's early dealings and some higher priced issues off sharply yesterday picked up as much as a point.

At the opening better prices were paid for duPont, General Electric, Southern Railway, Standard Oil (N. J.), commercial Investment Trust and American Water Works.

An index of public spending was supplied by a census bureau report showing wholesalers' sales in in June increased 6 per cent over May and 9 per cent over the same month last year.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Several large orders to buy wheat, believed to be belated mill buying, found traders unwilling to sell today and prices rose sharply in narrow dealings. Oats and rye were little changed.

Starting $^{3}/_{8}$-$1^{1}/_{4}$ cents a bushel above yesterday's finish, September $1.44^{1}/_{4}$-1.45; wheat later retained most of the gain. Rye opened unchanged to $^{3}/_{8}$ up, September $1.00^{3}/_{4}$. Oats started unchanged $^{1}/_{8}$ up.

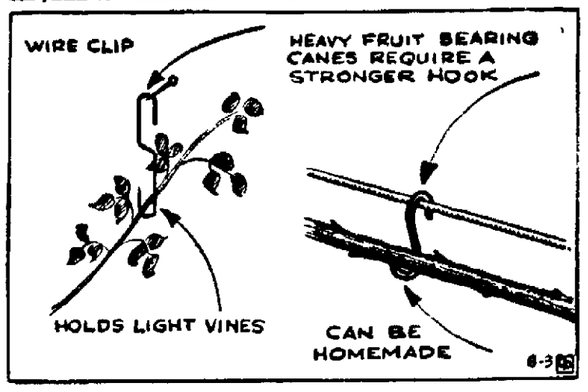
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Control of Vines In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

Since many victory gardens are small in area, there should be a place for each plant and each plant in its place. This applies particularly to climbing vegetables and certain fruit bearing vines which at this time of the year are apt to go a wandering unless they are kept under control by staking or training them on supports.

A little time and attention to control, especially of berry canes, at this season will save a world of work this fall or next spring in clearing away a tangled mass of intertwined vines.

If you find it is difficult to obtain the sort of light wire needed for vine or cane supports, you will find that ordinary paper clips of the kind used in most offices make excellent supports for lightweight vines when opened lengthwise, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. One can work easily and quickly with them and the clips can be used many times.

Grapes, dewberry and boysenberry canes as well as other heavy vines will require larger and stronger hooks for their support, as illustrated. If such hooks are not available and you have or can obtain short lengths of heavy wire you can make your own "S" shaped hooks. The effort will be worthwhile, since such hooks can be used from year to year.

Such hooks are especially valuable in more northern climates, since by their use the entire vine can be easily loosened and laid on the ground where it can be covered over for the winter.

ALLIES CRACK MT. ETNA LINE IN NEW DRIVE

Capture Five Sicilian Towns as Berlin Reports FDR Offers Stiffer Terms.

along the Tyrrhenian sea coast toward Messina.

A communique reported the capture of Regalbuto, Capizzi and Cerami, and Prime Minister Churchill further disclosed the fall of Troina and Centuripe.

Churchill said American Seventh army troops stormed through the enemy's defense network at Troina, 10 miles east of Nicosia, and Canadian forces seized Regalbuto which lies almost in the shadow of towering Mt. Etna.

"A substantial bridgehead north of the Dittaino has been established," Allied headquarters announced.

"Many German dead are reported."

The Dittaino river flows immediately south of Catania.

Prime Minister Churchill said American troops driving along the northern coast toward the Axis "escape port" at Messina were advancing in the face of extensive demolitions by the enemy.

Large Allied reinforcements were brought up during last week's lull, he said, and the front has been "properly garnished" with artillery and supplies of every kind.

Underlining General Eisenhower's warning that Italy would be brought under devastating aerial assault, the Italian command reported today Allied bombers struck again at Naples, Italy's greatest port, and raided other points in southern Italy and Sardinia.

On the Italian home front, Premier Badoglio maintained his silent defiance of the Allies' invasion warnings, and dispatches from Madrid said there was talk of an impending "peace march" on Rome.

Anti-Fascist forces inside Italy were reported gathering strength to force Badoglio to capitulate.

An Algiers broadcast declared: "Our land forces will soon begin an offensive on the Italian mainland."

Axis Dive-Bombers Attack Palermo

By RICHARD TREGASKIS

PALERMO, Sicily, Aug. 1—(Delayed) —(INS)— Palermo was bombed for the first time today by Axis planes which swept in diving at full throttle in an attempt to blast the waterfront.

The raid began at 4:14 a. m. and was met by heavy anti-aircraft fire from American guns. The battle between the raiders and defenders shook the city for nearly an hour as the dive-bombers came in over Palermo in waves.

The raiders first dropped flares. Then they came in to make low altitude passes.

From the balcony of a hotel I was able to watch the nets of red balls and tracer bullets reaching up into the sky for the enemy craft.

I could hear the crescendo of the defending guns and the roar of the diving planes but the night was very black and I could not see the marauders.

Yanks Close Gap On Road to Victory

With the U. S. Seventh Army in Sicily, Aug. 1—(Delayed)—American troops met a savage German counter-attack today, stopped it, drove the enemy back and advanced in one of the hottest engagements of the drive on Messina.

They shoved the Germans back of the town of Troina some 20 miles west of Mount Etna's towering crater and they closed a big gap in the road to victory with a sturdy performance.

(Prime Minister Churchill told commons that the Americans were reported to have entered Troina yesterday evening.)

They did a man-sized job. For the Germans, fighting doggedly in a slow retreat toward Messina, have to be blasted from their positions with artillery, machine-guns and hand grenades.

Hamburg Left Place of Horror

STOCKHOLM —(AP)— An indication of the way in which the wheels of Hamburg's war industry have been halted by the Allied air attacks was given today upon the arrival of the Danish consulate secretary in Copenhagen from the stricken city.

"All obligations to work are suspended at the moment," he said.

Another eyewitness report of the shambles to which Germany's greatest seaport has been reduced was given by a Danish worker quoted in the Svenska Dagbladet, who said:

"After the attack nothing was the same as before. I saw only ruins. The city was burning everywhere—even the streets. Many persons were as good as naked. Some wore only underclothes.

"Whoever didn't see this devastation can't begin to imagine it. Bodies were lying everywhere and what was worse, almost all had their eyes open. They died from air pressure of giant bombs and their clothes were torn from their bodies."

HORATIO ALGER NEVER DID THIS

Boy, Too Young To Fight, Earns $70 Weekly.

NEW YORK —(INS)—He may not be old enough to fight, but he's plenty old enough to work—and as a foreman, at $70 a week.

This, according to the FBI, is the story of a 16-year-old youth who registered with his draft board as 18, so that he could get a job in a war plant.

The boy, whose name was not disclosed, not only got the job in the milling-machine division of a large war plant, but advanced rapidly until he was made foreman of the department. After being reprimanded by the FBI, he was sent on his way—to his job.

JAPS' MUNDA DEFENSE CRACKS

Yanks Score Advance Against Airfield, Salamaua Brought Under Artillery Fire.

Japanese stronghold at Salamaua under artillery bombardment for the first time.

These new successes were recounted today in a communique which also told of a one-sided aerial victory over the Japanese, of the firing of an enemy destroyer, and of a heavy bombing of the Buin Faisi harbor and the Kahill airdrome, the enemy's major operating base in the Solomons.

Medium artillery blazed away at the Salamaua airdrome; destroying grounded planes, demolishing a 60-foot section of the adjacent Francisco river bridge, and dropping shells directly on anti-aircraft batteries.

Heavy bombers dropped 84 tons of explosives on the town itself. Numerous fires were started and damage was heavy. Other four-engined aircraft blew up a large fuel or supply dump and started huge fires at the Lae, 10 miles up the coast.

Fourteen Lightning fighters, escorting bombers hunting barges along the southern coast of the Huon peninsula, pounced upon an equal number of enemy fighters. Eleven Zeros were shot down in flames. One more was listed as a probable. Two escaped. The Lightnings and the bombers under their care all returned to base.

The Japanese sent divebombers against American positions on Rendova and lost three of them without inflicting any damage or casualties.

A night reconnaissance plane set fire to a Japanese destroyer off New Britain.

Japs Claim 18 Allied Sinkings

LONDON —(AP)— A Berlin Radio broadcast quoted a Japanese imperial headquarters communique today as saying that Japanese planes attacked Rendova harbor in the Solomons and sank a destroyer, a large transport, four medium and six small transports, and six landing boats.

In addition, the broadcast, which was recorded by the Associated Press, said that the Japanese had damaged a cruiser and set fire to harbor installations. Nine allied planes were said to have been shot down.

The Japanese claims were entirely without confirmation.

Flies At Speed Of Sound, Records Seen Tottering

LONDON —(AP)— Aviation experts are studying the possibilities unfolded by the feat of an American test pilot who shattered all world records when he succeeded in diving a P-38 Lightning plane 25,000 feet, or nearly five miles, and achieved a speed of more than 780 miles an hour—approximately the speed of sound.

The flier, Lieut. Col. Cass S. Hough of Plymouth, Mich., technical director of the Eighth Fighter Command of the United States army air forces, was given the distinguished Flying Cross by Brig. Gen. Frank O. D. Hunter, commander of American fighter planes in the European theater. Hough's citation said the award was made for special attainment in "independent flight research."

Hough's dive is believed to be the longest in aviation history. It was made in September, 1942.

(The highest speed previously officially recorded in a power dive was approximately 725 miles an hour.)

Wild rioting that accounted for at least six killed, 195 injured and 363 arrested, broke out in Harlem, New York City's famed Negro district, after a Negro soldier was shot and slightly wounded by a white policeman during an altercation in a hotel lobby. Police are shown standing beside one of the stores damaged in the riot. Authorities blamed hoodlums for trouble.

Spends 15 Days Behind Enemy Lines, Befriended By Sicilians

the fuselage because he remembered nothing more until he awoke with the sun high in the sky. He was on a mountain slope. His head ached, was cut and bloody. Near his was his tangled parachute. How it opened he doesn't know.

"I started out to find my ship but the Italians beat me to it," he said. "I finally saw it. It had crashed all right but a lot of Italian soldiers were around it and some were digging a big hole a little distance away. I looked around and then decided to get the hell out of there."

Rohr started south toward the British line. Hunger and thirst oppressed him. Unable to speak Italian, he tried a single word on a native he met. It was "aqua." He got both food and water and that night he slept on a hillside.

He stayed there for seven days and the Italian who had first fed him, continued to feed him. Hearing guns in the distance, he started off toward them, sleeping where he could and begging food. One Italian shepherd gave him the clothes he reached Mistretta in—"And the pants were so dirty they could stand by themselves."

"I cruised around in the mountains and met two Italian deserters heading for the American lines," he said. "We made a three-day hike and those Italians like to have walked hell out of me. They were going too fast. My feet hurt so bad I told the Italians they could go to hell as far as I was concerned and I stopped to wash my feet in a mountain stream."

One night he slept within 50 yards of a German gun. Next he ran into a family of Sicilians who helped him.

"The mother treated me like her son," he said.

The father of the family heard about the Americans reaching Mistretta and brought Rohr in on a mule.

Rohr, who was a student in civil engineering at Ohio State before joining the air force a year and a half ago, lost some weight but otherwise was in good health.

CONGRESS ON SPOT, FATHER DRAFT ORDERED

Legislators Given Only 16 Days To Block M'Nutt's Surprise Move.

might be delayed at least until next January, and then it might not be necessary to draft more than a few, depending upon the casualty rate in forthcoming battles.

On the basis of McNutt's statement yesterday, however, it was unofficially estimated that it might be necessary to take 300,000 men now classified in III-A before the end of the year.

McNutt said 625,000 men would be needed to fill the army's needs in October, November and December. About 150,000 will be youths reaching the age of 18: An estimated 175,000 more will come from reclassification of IV-F's—physical disabilities—and expiration of occupational deferments. That would leave about 300,000, or 100,000 a month, to come from the current III-A's.

McNutt's order provides that no bona fide pre-Pearl Harbor father shall be called prior to October 1, even if a local board has to fail to fill its quota, and after that date they shall be taken only after all other possibilities have been reviewed.

He said that the new order does not abolish Class III-A, but that men would be reclassified out of that group as needed. The order said that pre-Pearl Harbor fathers 18 through 37 would be subject to induction after October 1 "without distinction regarding the number or ages of their dependent children."

The order to local boards set forth only two conditions as a possible basis for deferment: Fathers who are key men in agriculture or essential industry, and fathers whose induction would cause extreme hardship and privation to their families.

McNutt revealed that selective service has collaborated with the armed services to lower physical standards to permit larger recruitment of single men and has urged men and women disqualified for military service to substitute for single men in every possible capacity in essential industry.

"We continue that plea for on the response will depend, in large measure, how many fathers must be called to military service," he said.

The WMC instructed local boards to seek every available single man within their jurisdiction before calling fathers and suggested that they:

1. Comb the ranks of IV-F's who may now qualify for service.
2. Give careful scrutiny to other classifications.

16,500 Fathers In Ohio Facing Call

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— Approximately 16,500 Ohio fathers face induction during the last three months of 1943, it was estimated today on the basis of a summary of the army's manpower needs.

Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt estimated that about half of 625,000 men needed by the armed forces in October, November and December would have to be reclassified from 3-A. Remarried men without children who were married before Dec. 8, 1941; men placed in 1-A because they left an essential industry or were engaged in a non-essential industry, and fathers who maintain a bona fide family relationship.

for minor burns and smoke and fume inhalation were released from hospitals last night.

Two dozen firemen who had been called to the scene of the disaster were hospitalized for observation as soon as officials recognized the victims had been gassed as well as burned.

Miliary secrecy prevented officials from talking about the explosion. Capt. William N. Noble, of the army's chemical warfare service, described the plant operations as "army contract work."

Surviving besides the parents are his wife, Daisy; three sisters, Doris Houpt, Shelby, Alma Hout, Dayton, and Mrs. Mabel Paullin, Manhattan Beach, Cal.; six brothers, Ralph and Glenn, both of Shelby; Clayton, Cleveland, Fred, Oakland, Cal., Walter, Bucyrus, and Pfc. WIDOW AND FOSTER DAUGHTER GET BULK OF DICKSON ESTATE

The will of Roy B. Dickson, filed in probate court today, leaves the bulk of his estate to his widow, Mrs. Grace Dickson, and Mrs. James Brownscombe, a foster daughter.

Dickson, owner of the Evergreens restaurant and Dickson market building and a well-known business man, died of a heart attack last Monday.

Provisions of the will specify that Mrs. Dickson receive the residence at 246 West Third and the household furniture, the building on West Third street occupied by the Sears Roebuck company, his stock in the Stuhldreher Floral company, his stock in the Mansfield Savings and Trust, $5,000 in cash, and an income of $250 a month until her death or until the estate has been fully distributed according to the will.

Mrs. Brownscombe inherits part of lot 886 on Dickson avenue and the house on that lot, inlot 10841 and $5,000. James Brownscombe is the recipient of lot 10842 and inherits with his wife the Evergreens restaurant.

To his brother, James M. Dickson, and sister, Lillian Dickson goes the Dickson market. Miss Dickson also inherits the undivided interest in Section A of Woodland.

The will provides for $500 to be given to the First Lutheran church and for Kenneth Sloan, Hazel Sloan, Dorothy Mae Sloan and Alice Marie Brownscombe each to inherit one-seventh of the interest in the Axtell Dairy Products company. To Mary Rensch, manager of the Evergreens, is bequeathed $1,000 and the residue of the estate is left to Mrs. Brownscombe.

The will was drawn on May 26, 1939 and the codicil attached was drawn Aug. 9, 1941. James Dickson is named executor.

"Why, Dad, you look like a million!"

SURE, there's a war on but, here in America, Dad still can buy a new suit when he wishes. And, though the wool may have come from the West; the cloth woven "down South"; the tailoring done in the East, Dad is able to buy the suit right in his home town.

Have you thought why? Simply because the railroad links his town with the rest of this great nation. It's a vital part of Dad's life even in so simple a matter as buying a new suit of clothes.

Every day, in many ways, your railroad is contributing to the American way of life. In fact, its first job right now is helping fight for that way of life. And, when Victory is won, your community, more than ever, can place complete confidence in the men of the B & O.

Declares U. S. Poised for Offensive Throughout World

OMERVELL URGES FULL PRODUCTION

serts Battle Schedules Depend on Home Front; 'Ball's Rolling.'

y International News Service)
NEW YORK—American troops poised to take the offensive oughout the world Lieut. Gen. ehon B. Somervell chief of the ny service forces, declared to- y in pointing out that the na- 's military position now may rightfully regarded with "op- ism."

"Our next offensive actions may e place at any time in widely arated parts of the world," neral Somervell said in an ad- ss before the Commerce and lustry Association of New York, orporated. "The time schedule these operations has been es- blished."

Emphasizing the need for con- ued all-out war production, neral Somervell added, how- r.

"We must not let this optimism any way abate our effort at me. Quick victory, as the con- est of Sicily, means an increase the tempo of the offensive. ch victories develop the mo- ntum of attack.

"The ball is rolling, it must in and not lose speed. Sup- ies and materials must be ade available at an eccelerated te to permit the full exploita- on of each victory to bring out the earliest possible con- usion of the war. A failure to ploit victory means delay and ss of life."

General Somervell said the army ocurement schedule has fallen ind approximately 300 million lars in the past six months.

Only two fifths of our program 1943 was accomplished in the t half of the year, he said, id three-fifths remains for mpletion. Monthly schedules st be increased throughout the r if our procurement plan is be attained."

Asserting that production edules are interlocked with bat- schedules General Somervell l that May figures showed pro- tion was five and one-half per t below forecast. June, he led showed no improvement. eliminary figures for the first days of July indicate that July s decidedly worse than June, said.

Charles E. Wilson, executive vice irman of the War Production rd told the gathering that nufacturers who are scheduled produce a certain quantity of r material by a certain date e undertaken a specific mili- y obligation.

"If we fail in our undertak- gs," he said, "the military ans themselves may be thrown t of joint or delayed. That eans a longer war. It means harder costlier victory."

Wilson pointed out that it is thing to be confident over the sent American victories, and s quite another to be overcon- ent.

"What we have to fear now is so much Hitler and Tojo," he d, "as over-confidence and r-optimism Those are the l enemies insidiously working m within to undermine our ver.

"The very fact that we now talk an atmosphere of anticipated tory makes it all the more im- rative that we concentrate on hard realities of increased war oduction."

Stressing that the casualty lists the American army in North ica and Sicily were far lower n anticipated, Wilson said that s was mainly because American ops had enough ships of every d to make their landings in the cessary numbers and with the cessary supplies.

Army-Navy "E" lapel pins will be sent to those employes who have been at the company for the past six months during the time covered by the white star award.

U. S., RUSSIAN WAR RELATIONS ARE IMPROVED

Writer Sees Many Problems Ahead for Peace; Both Sides Play Down Other's Battles.

(Editor's Note: Henry J. Cassidy has just returned to his post as chief of the Associated Press bureau in Moscow after six months on leave in the United States.)

By HENRY J. CASSIDY

MOSCOW —(AP)— A two-weeks flight from Washington to Moscow and frank talks with people at both ends of the line provide a rare birdseye view of Soviet-American relations: Close co-operation in war but problems ahead for peace.

Both military and diplomatic officials indicate a steady improvement in day-to-day relations with co-operation now better than at any other time since the war started.

Although the third lease-lend protocol which was due to start July 1 is not yet signed, deliveries are being completed under the second agreement which expired June 30 and supplies are moving in the greatest volume ever.

On the battlefields, co-operation is shown by the coincidence of the Russian offensive on the Orel front with the Allied invasion of Sicily.

A tendency is apparent, however, in public and press of both sides to play down the other's actions.

Before I left the United States, there was some hesitation to accept the German attack at Kursk on July 5 as a full-fledged offensive, yet I have just seen striking evidence to that effect from within Nazi lines.

The evidence was contained in a dairy found on the body of Hans Gerhardt, an officer in the 32nd German battalion of engineers.

On July 4 he wrote: "There's something in the air. It smells like a storm. It is the beginning of our offensive, it is time.

"Alarm. We are preparing to march 1900 o'clock our first car leaves town for new victories. For a long time the Kursk salient has been like a pin sticking in our eye. We want it cut out."

On July 5 he continued: "0230 o'clock the sound of our planes fills the air."

By July 8 Gerhardt recorded that the offensive was slowing down. On July 15 he reported his transfer to Orel to face the Russian counter-offensive. On July 18 he was killed at Bolkhov.

Similarly, the Allied campaign in Sicily has been getting a relatively small play in the Soviet press. It was first referred to as a "landing operation on the island of Sicily" and now as "military operations on the island of Sicily."

President Roosevelt's broadcast on July 28, however, was given great prominence in the Russian newspapers, occupying two columns in the foreign news sections.

FIND STOLEN CAR

Chillicothe Officers Locate Vehicle Taken Here.

State highway patrolmen reported yesterday to sheriff's deputies here the discovery in Chillicothe of an automobile stolen from Mansfield Friday night.

The car owned by Donald Swigart, 12 Dunbilt court, was apparently taken from its parking place on Main street at the corner of Fifth street after the owner was knocked unconscious by the thief, deputies said.

Swigart told the deputies he couldn't remember anything between the time he unlocked the door of his car Friday night until he wandered dazed into the home of his brother, Stewart road, on Saturday morning. He bore the mark of a hard blow on the left temple and his right eye was bruised and swollen, they said.

The car when found in Chillicothe was out of gas but the keys were in it and it was in good running condition, patrolmen reported.

STABBED DURING MAGICIAN SHOW

Rubber Worker Killed While Scuffling In Akron Night Club.

(By Associated Press)

AKRON—While a magician performed his tricks in a dimly-lighted east Akron night club, a rubber worker was stabbed to death early today under a table.

Joseph Oldaker of the police vice squad identified the victim as Wilbur E. Carney, 24-year-old widower employed at the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, who died of eight stab wounds apparently inflicted with a small penknife. Charged with murder in an affidavit filed by Detective Wayne Pressler was Clifford Dilbeck, 33, a Goodyear supervisor who denied the stabbing.

Assistant Prosecutor Bernard Roetzel of Summit county quoted Dilbeck as saying he returned home from work last midnight, found his wife was not at home and went to the cafe to look for her. He asked her to leave Carney and the other couple to accompany him home and then related that Carney grabbed him by the neck and started a scuffle.

Both men rolled under the table and it was then, Oldaker asserted, that Carney was stabbed

Dilbeck denied the stabbing and told police he did not have a knife, Roetzel reported. Dilbeck is the father of a 13-year-old daughter.

The article refers to him as being an Arkansas boy, but H. H. Miller says that he knows that his son piloted one of the planes on that raid.

Miller has three other sons in the service besides Richard, and a daughter who is an army nurse.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1943.

The Japanese grin should not be mistaken for "the smile that won't come off."

Nice thing about that new word, "radar," is that it is spelled the same from either direction.

Conclusion reached by Dr. Gallup in analyzing a recent poll is that "the election vote will depend not only on attitudes toward the Republican candidate, but also on attitudes toward the candidate put up by the Democrats"—just as you may have thought.

Considering Age of Draftees

SENATOR TAFT'S suggestion that the selective service system be overhauled, so as to establish a line of demarcation in drafting men under and over 30 years of age, will need more than casual thought before decision can be reached as to its practicability.

It cannot be doubted that men under 30—or under 25, for that matter—are more readily adaptable to military training and to the rigors of war, than are civilians in the higher age bracket.

All of Senator Taft's stated reasons for asking for the change are logical, but, after all, the hard fact is that it is military needs for manpower that must be met and it is the military authorities, rather than congress, that should be depended upon to make final decisions on how many men are to be drafted into various branches of service.

After these decisions have been made and announced, however, it would be advisable to have the actual operation of selective service handled by civilian authorities, made responsible for producing the number of men required.

There would also be an advantage, incidentally, in having the army and navy compile lists of facilities, equipment and supplies needed, with construction and production problems devolving on persons trained for those specific tasks.

Military authorities have a big job to do in looking after things about which they have knowledge—they should neither assume nor be burdened with responsibilities outside their field of experience and training.

Bricker's 'Views' Subject To Change

AN INTERESTING slant on the attitude of a politician toward candidacy for an office to which he aspires is provided by Governor John W. Bricker in a statement to the effect that he would "not attempt to substitute his own views, domestic or foreign, for policies laid down by the party."

This assertion was based on the supposition that Governor Bricker might become a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, or become the nominee.

"A candidate should be bound by his party platform," Governor Bricker is quoted as having said in an interview. "If he does not expect to be bound by it, he should not accept the nomination."

It somehow seems that Governor Bricker's thinking on this subject is in reverse and that it is the record and publicly expressed views of a candidate for the presidency, on domestic and foreign policies, that should influence his party in the matter of nomination, rather than that his own "views"—if any—be supinely disregarded in favor of party policies.

Qualities of leadership such as should be demanded of an aspirant for the presidency include sufficiently well defined views on national and international affairs as to make these a dominating factor in choosing a candidate. It seems unlikely that a man whose "views" can be readily adapted to the expediency of party politics will be seriously considered when the time comes for selection of a Republican presidential candidate.

Segregated or Scattered--Which?

SCATTERING of thinly disguised houses of prostitution through otherwise desirable residential sections of a city is the apparently unavoidable penalty of eliminating the "red light district"—as is now being experienced in Mansfield.

Present clamp-down on the segregated district that Mansfield has tolerated for the past half century was instigated by the war department in an effort to prevent spread of venereal diseases among service men and war workers but the extent to which such procedure is effective remains undisclosed.

If, as some contend—and as the volume of patronage seems to indicate—such houses must be accepted as "a necessary evil," then the argument for segregation and regular examination of inmates by a physician seems stronger than the alternative of scattering disease-breeding harlots around the city without provision for the examinations required when such places are operated under some form of supervision.

Henry Ford's Philosophy at 80

HENRY FORD, on his eightieth birthday, says that health, wealth and happiness all come out of constructive work. Money, he asserts, is merely a tool, a byproduct of work. If you start out to do or make something, and keep at it, the means of doing it will turn up, he believes, money or no money. But people who think money is wealth, and who try to live off money, easily become parasites.

Many people still believe that money is a thing in itself. It isn't. One cannot eat it if he's hungry or wear it if he's cold or be sheltered by it against a storm unless someone else has already made the things which money will buy. Work, thrift, and faith have built this country and all other civilizations in the world. Only when people fail to work and save, do civilizations fail, or individuals suffer poverty. It's not money that makes people comfortable, or its possession that makes them happy. It's the mental balance of working, earning and seeing life grow better under one's hands and brain, that contributes to personal happiness and well-being.

New developments in the cellulose field provide a hint that edible paper may result—so, if printers' ink can be given a vitamin content, yesterday's paper may sometime provide a tasty lunch.

Word comes that the three-hour picturization of "For Whom the Bell Tolls" is to be shortened—possibly to accommodate patrons who prefer separate double features.

Now in its eleventh year, the New Deal reminds one observer of a ten-year-old "new car"—it has lost some of its nuts.

ITALY'S PATHWWAY TO PEACE

Guidance By Russia Probable In Europe When Axis Loses Power

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE DOWNFALL of the doyen of European dictators, and the miserable collapse of his Fascist regime, strike me as likely to have a much greater effect on the morale of other Axis adherents than would have been the case had Mussolini and his government gone down to defeat in unity with flag flying.

True, the Allies had decreed death for Fascism. But it's one thing for an ism that's been toyed with by numerous countries to die with its boots on in battle, and quite another for it to go down with a bullet in its back while running away. Such an ignominious end is bound to trouble deep waters in other Axis-inclined countries where people are wondering whether their own governments are worth fighting for, or at least have come to recognize that the Hitlerian cause is a snare and a delusion.

Germany itself will be one of these. So will Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary. And up in the far north little Finland long has been showing signs of regret for her entanglement with Fascism and Nazism.

The Balkans have been ripening fast for the plucking these many months. Rumania with her uneasy dictatorship is in a particularly bad way, having been despoiled and bled white on Russian battlefields to which her soldiers have been driven under the lash by Hitler.

It's a hundred to one that the people of this unhappy country would be glad to see the Axis and their own government at the bottom of the Black sea.

AS ITALY is being knocked out of the war, so will Rumania—and perhaps without great pressure. A few more devastating air-raids such as our Yankee Liberators carried out over the great Rumanian oil refineries at Ploesti Sunday should set the country to shaking like a bowl of jelly. Collapse of Rumania would tend to hasten the fall of her neighboring allies.

That brings us up to a question of the utmost importance to the United Nations and to the future of Europe. As these Axis adherents fold up one after another—and they are bound to reach that point sooner or later—what forms of government are they going to select for their rehabilitation?

I think it's safe to say that they will be swayed heavily by the guidance of the Allied nation under whose sphere of politico-economic influence they come. That influence will be doubly strong if this Allied power has made a sensational record in the World war.

Yes, of course we're talking about Russia. Who else could it be in eastern and central Europe?

THIS COLUMN already has recorded that on my recent trip through the war theaters, from England to China, I found a very general belief that the Soviet Union will by force of circumstances dominate eastern and central Europe—perhaps virtually all Europe clear through to the English channel—after the war.

This vast, powerful, self-contained empire is the logical successor to Germany, as things now lie. I didn't find anyone who believed that anything was likely to alter this. And Hitler held the countries of the central and eastern continent in the palm of his hand when he launched his war.

Into this picture fits the political complexion of much of Europe. It won't be Fascist and it won't be Nazi, because the Allies have agreed to exterminate these two isms. But we shall see marked changes, and the drift may easily be towards Communism in many nations.

Moscow recently abolished the comintern, which was the general staff for the original Communist program of world revolution. This removed a bone of contention between Russia and her allies. It can scarcely mean, however, that Russia has abandoned hope that other countries will become sovietized, to swell the influence of Communism throughout the world.

Thus there has been intense interest in the recent formation in Moscow of the "Free Germany National committee," which comprises German nationals such as refugees and soldiers in Russia. This committee is appealing to the German people to revolt, demand immediate peace and establish a democracy.

The organization naturally has the sanction of the Soviet government, and it's fair to assume that the committee is aiming at a Soviet regime for Germany. This seems to be confirmed by word from Moscow that the Communist party has given its support to the committee, a highly important move.

Dave Boone Says:

IT LOOKS as if the old run around system of dealing with warlords might be over. For centuries any blowsy, loud-mouthed, foul and murderous old pest who found himself on the skids could cross the border into a neutral country and thumb his nose at his victims. But time has been called on that racket now.

Of course Switzerland or any neutral country would be within its rights in providing asylum to refugee trouble-makers as it has so often done, but it won't be so easy from now on.

* * *

But you can't be too sure of such things. Remember away back when we were going to hang Kaiser Bill and all his crew? We were just as bitter at Bill then as we are about Benito and Adolf. But he just bought a ticket into a neutral state and lived comfortaly ever after.

Mussolini and Hitler and their gangs have long had their plans about beating the rap if things went bad. They had the money put aside and everything. I think they even had their favorite type of scenery all chosen.

* * *

But President Roosevelt's demand, supported by all the Allies, that neutrals cease the brazen nonsense of giving asylum to the very cut-throats who are their worst enemies, may balk all this. I think the day when a gangster warlord could pick himself a nice estate, saw a little wood and write his memoirs is over.

Tipping Nuisance.

The celebrated authority on subjects of etiquet, Mrs. Emily Post, recently gave out rules about tipping. She did not discuss whether she considered tipping an evil or a blessing, but merely offered her opinion that 10 per cent of the bill was normally a fair tip, so long as the minimum tip did not fall below 10 cents.

Tipping has long been regarded as a nuisance which ought to be abolished, but no one has ever figured out a way of doing it. It is a practice imported from Europe which ought to have been left over there. When a man buys a dinner there is no reason why the management should expect him to make a gratuitous contribution towards the salary of the hired help. All overhead ought to be included in the price of the food.—Ohio State Journal.

Non-Operating Rail Employes Create Serious Dilemma for FDR

WASHINGTON—Though it hasn't got all the publicity of the coal mine strike, one of the toughest labor problems FDR faces is the threatened strike of 1,100,000 non-operating railroad workers.

What the president is up against is overriding one of his top and ablest administrators, Judge Fred Vinson, new economic stabilizer, or facing a possible strike of RR clerks, machinists, telegraphers and shop-workers.

What happened was that a special emergency panel appointed by the president recommended a blanket wage increase for the non-operating railway workers. But Economic Stabilizer Vinson turned the recommendation down as inflationary and contrary to the War Labor board's "Little Steel" wage ceiling formula.

Vinson has compiled a careful study of wages and prices, contends that prices actually have been rolled back more than labor realizes; also that labor's total "take," figuring in over-time rather than just the hourly wage rate, is higher than the price rise.

So he "held the line" against the special panel's recommendation.

Whereupon William Leiserson, chairman of the mediation board, and George Harrison, head of the Railway Clerks, went to the White House and held a long session endeavoring to overrule Judge Vinson. They came away confident that they had succeeded. The president seemed sympathetic, and Harrison reported back to his union that he was on their side.

Actually, however, the president sent a note to Judge Vinson asking him to check regarding the situation, and it doesn't look as if he would overrule his economic stabilizer.

If he stands pat, the president and the nation face the danger of a serious railway strike. However, White House advisers are confident that rail workers will be more patriotic than John L. Lewis; also are shrewd enough to see the terrific national reaction against labor which resulted from the coal miners strike.

Milo Perkins' Future.

ONE of the really top men in the war picture, whose advice is generally heeded, telephoned Leo Crowley the other day regarding Milo Perkins. He urged that Crowley, now administering the Economic Warfare duties of both Jesse Jones and Henry Wallace, should retain Milo Perkins, former executive director of BEW under Wallace.

Crowley listened sympathetically to his friend's advice, but replied:

"Milo's done a tremendous job against terrific obstacles. And he's had a very unlucky break as a reward for it. I would like to keep him on because I know he would be of great value to me. But I have virtual orders get rid of him."

The orders, naturally, could have come from only one place—the White House.

Note: Jesse Jones really hated Milo Perkins more than the vice president. Both from Texas, Perkins worked his way up from a job with a grain bag company and Jesse referred to him as "that smart little bag salesman." Perkins, whose only two sons have been killed, was one of the most passionate pushers of the war effort in all Washington. He is now going to Mexico for a rest, after which he is through with government for keeps.

"Father" Baruch.

GAUNT, grey Bernie Baruch, whose relentless prodding of the war effort has saved more lives than anyone can estimate, is worried over a lot of things besides tanks, airplanes and machine guns. Among other things he is worried over the human problem of readjusting the lives of people who have flooded the cities, who have been thrown out of joint by the war.

Sitting on his park bench in Lafayette park, where he holds "office" conferences, Bernie sees the stream of girls, thousands of them from all over the U. S. A., dumped into government offices, into crowded boarding houses, and wonders what will happen to them when the war is over.

Baruch won't tell you—but his friends will—about how he handled this problem after the last war.

He had employed several thousand clerks and stenographers in his War Industries board, and after the Armistice he began to worry about whether these girls were going back to their homes or would remain in the exciting cities.

So he sent each girl a letter thanking her for the time and loyal work she had given her country. And as a hint that she should go back to her mother he suggested: "Anyone who will apply at my office can receive a railroad ticket back home."

Baruch also attached to each letter a $10 bill.

The railroad tickets were paid for out of his own pocket, since the government does not pay for personal transportation, and it cost Baruch many thousands of dollars. He was a little fearful that some of the girls might have taken the tickets, then turned them in to the railroad. However, he hoped that he might have helped to get at least a fair proportion out of the city and back home.

Merry-Go-Round.

FRIENDS of Wendell Willkie have been probing GOP Governor Earl Warren of California about running as vice-presidential candidate on a Willkie ticket . . . One thing President Roosevelt talked to President Avila Camacho about while in Mexico was permitting 12,000 Polish refugees to enter Mexico from Europe. Mexico has consented . . . Congressman Mike Monroney of Oklahoma is trying to rent Bill Bullett's palatial Washington house now that the ex-ambassador will run for mayor of Philadelphia . . . Philadelphia's Jacob Billikopf recalls a statement by Gifford Pinchot: "I have just so much steam in me and if I put it in too many pipes, not one will get enough heat." "That," says Billikopf, "may be the trouble with many-jobbed Jesse Jones. . . Burnet Hershey of the Overseas Press club was one of the first to predict categorically that Sicily would be a complete pushover if the Allies invaded . . . John Carlson's book "Under Cover" on American Fascism is really going places.

Amazing Speed and Precision Accounted For Successful Invasion of Sicily.

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—Our first few days aboard ship after the Sicilian landings were broken by many things besides air raids.

A few wounded soldiers were brought from shore for our doctors to treat before the hospital ships arrived. Important generals came to confer on our ship. We had fresh tomatoes and watermelon at the same meal. We took little trips up and down the coast. Repair parties back from the beaches brought souvenir Fascist banners, and stories of how poor the Sicilians were and how glad they were that the war was over for them. The weather remained divine. Our waters and beaches were forever changing.

I think it was at daylight on the third morning when we awoke to find the Mediterranean absolutely devoid of ships, except for scattered naval vessels. The vast convoys that brought us over had unloaded to the last one and slipped out during night.

For a few hours the water was empty, the shore seemed lifeless, and all the airplanes had disappeared. You couldn't believe that we were really at war.

AND then after lunch you looked out again and here the sea was veritably crawling with new ships—hundreds of them, big and little. Every one of them was coated at the top with a brown layer like the icing on a cake, which turned out when we drew closer to be decks crammed solidly with Army vehicles and khaki-clad men.

We kept pouring men and machines into Sicily as though it were a giant hopper. The schedule had all been worked out ahead of time: On D Day Plus 3 Such-and Such Division would arrive. A few hours later another convoy bringing tanks was due. Ships unloaded and started right back for new loads.

The whole thing went so fast that in at least one instance I know of the army couldn't pour its men and equipment into the African embarkation ports as fast as the returning ships arrived.

Unloading these ceaseless convoys in Sicily was a saga. The navy sent salvage parties of Seabees ashore right behind the assault troops and began reclaiming harbors and fixing up beaches for unloading. The army worked so smoothly that material never piled up on the beaches but got immediately on its way to the front. The number of vehicles that had to be landed early in the game to take care of this was almost beyond conception.

We have stevedoring regiments here made up of New York professional stevedores. We have naval captains who in civil life ran world-wide ship-salvaging concerns and made enormous salaries.

We run some ships up to the beaches, we unload others at ports, we empty big freighters by lightering their cargoes to shore in hundreds of assault barges and amphibious trucks. Great ships loaded with tanks have been known to beach and unload in the fantastic time of half an hour.

Big freighters anchored a mile from shore have been emptied into hordes of swarming, clammering small boats in 18 hours, when the same unloading with all modern facilities at a New York pier would take four days.

Convoys arrive, empty, and slip away for another load. Men work like slaves on the beaches. Bosses shout and rush as no construction boss ever did in peacetime. Speed, speed, speed!

You walk gingerly on big steel pontoon piers, and you can't tell a naval lieutenant commander in coveralls from an army sergeant in a sun helmet. Sometimes it seems as if half the men of America must be here, all working madly together.

AND do you realize what it is? It is America's long-awaited power of production finally rolling into the far places where it must be to end the war. It sounds trite when it is put into words, but if you could be here and see you would understand how the might of material can overwhelm everything before it. We saw it in the last days of Tunisia. We are seeing it here. We can picture it in inklings of the enemy collapse that inevitably lies ahead.

The point is that we on the scene know for sure that you can substitute machines for lives and that if we can plague and smother the enemy with an unbearable weight of machinery in these next few months, hundreds of thousands of our young men whose expectancy was small can some day walk again through their own front doors.

Farmer's Diary

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE 'E' PENNANT

ON THE DAY one of our leading defense plants received the "E" pennant, thousands of curious, interested persons came for miles.

Outstanding production goals had been reached, and our town was deservedly advertised. Men in brilliant uniforms officiated. Head members of the manufacturing firm were in the receiving line. Workmen and their families thronged to see the display of items they had helped to make—proudly wore the sterling silver pins denoting excellence and wholesale co-operation. Some of these men had worked seven days a week for many months. Now they were honored by Uncle Sam—not with money, but with the letter 'E' on a soft deep background. It was a stirring ceremony.

It meant that this firm had done all that could be expected of it, in times when the quality and quantity of its goods were of strategic importance to this nation. It meant that behind the splendid leadership of this working unit, the government stood with guarantees of wages and profits—a strong assistant, holding a green light for uninterrupted strides ahead.

THAT same day I came upon a farmer sitting upon his home-made pasture gate, watching 50 head of two-year-old beef cattle graze. He had bought them, he said, last fall on the open market, after Secretary Wickard advised all farmers with surplus food for livestock to adopt this plan. There were no ceilings, then. It seemed like a patriotic duty.

"The bank holds a mortgage on 'em," he told me briefly. "They want to know when I'm goin' to sell. If I'd turn 'em off right now, after feeding all my surplus feed into 'em, I could a little more'n pay the bank. If I could only come out even, I'd sell tomorrow, and take my loss—and grin. 'Pears like I'm givin' the war effort a fraction more than my whole year's work . . . and believe it or not, I've been averaging 16 hours a day for a long while now.

"But somehow when I look at that herd of cattle, I forget the unspeakable confusion in Washington, and the asinine bungling of the food problem and I think of our hungry boys in foreign lands, vanishing in the smoke of battle. I think of starving babies and gaunt undernourished parents in so many places—and I'm glad my own wife and kids have enough to eat."

He was a big man. I saw his broad gnarled fingers as he laid a mighty hand upon a weathered post. I saw that his palms were calloused, and heavy veins protruded along his deeply tanned arms. His wide hat was pushed back and I saw that his eyes were kind, and his leathery, furrowed face was serene and purposeful. I knew that in the window of his home, a service flag bore a proud star for his oldest son.

And I wondered—"Why doesn't Uncle Sam give such men as this an 'E' to put beside it?"
